DID TWIN SULLIVAN BEAT JACK O'BRIEN?

Think That Is What Has Not Sent Word.

He never did the likes of this before, and, besides, he never lost the chance to send his mother a telegram after a fight. I wonder if there is a chance of him having lost the battle? In his last letter he said he was in good condition, and we expected to hear of his winning long before this."

It has been eight days now, and O'Brien has failed to send word about his fight with Sullivan. In his letter of July 29, he spoke of having struck it rich in the Klondike, and said he was picking up large sums of money, going from town to town on horseback and giving exhibitions with Paddy Slavin. On top of the match with Sullivan he had signed to fight a big fellow named Bates, who claims to be the champion of the gold fields:

In his letter O'Brien said he was in excellent shape and expected to win from Sullivan with ease, and did not fear the outcome of his battle with Bates, who weighs 220 pounds, and is in every way as big as Jeffries. Bates only claim to distinction is due to the fact that he knocked out Dick Burley, the San Francisco hippodromer, in a single round some weeks ago, and in consequence crowned himself the fistic king of the Klondike.

A "rule of the green" of the chdest sort that has ever been seen on a links in the history of golf occurred in the final for the first cup between Walter; J. Travers and Jerome D. Travers at Shinnecook, Hills Golf club tournament.

They were all even playing the home hole, Travers having the hone and getting off a secreaming ball. There was a slight pull to it, and, flying somewhat off the course, the ball hit an Indian caddy boy in the back.

Travers drove a straight ball, and then all hands set out to search for Travers's ball in the stubble. There were 200 or 300 engaged in the search and every inch of ground was scanned over and over again for ten minutes.

"Time is up," said W. A. Putnam of the Green committee, as he looked at his watch. Travers cast a sharp glance in his direction, which meant that he didn't want to claim the hole on the technicality. As a last expedient Travers called up the caddy boy who had been struck and who had been as zealous as the others in searching for the ball.
