THE W. C. T. U.

The matters to be dealt with at the meeting of the county W. C. T. U. were discussed at the meeting of the St. John Union yesterday afternoon. The meeting opened with a special devotional service led by Mrs. Hope Thompson. Mrs. David Hipwell was in the chair for the business session. Mrs. Thompson gave an excellent report of her work of visiting the hospital and Mrs. Seymour, having reported the case of an out-of-town patient, arrangements were made for special gifts and visits to this case. The temperance situation was spoken of at length.

POLICEMAN'S SHOT

KILLS RICH BUILDER

Draws His Pistol While Chatting at Friend's Home and Accidentally Fires It.

New Hyde Park, L. I., March 8.—Theodore Gies, a wealthy builder of Fourth street, this place, was accidentally shot and killed by Policeman Joseph L. Hofstad of Maspeth. The shooting occurred in the dining room of the Gies home, and was witnessed by Mrs. Gies and her brother, and a friend who had accompanied Hofstad. Mrs. Gies, who was standing near her husband when the shot was fired, became hysterical when she saw him fall and has since been under the care of a physician. One of their children was in the next room.

Hofstad and Andrew J. Lutz came here to look over some houses Gies was building. Gies recognized them and called to them to come over to the house nearby. As Gies started into the kitchen he turned to the others and laughingly said:

"I thought you fellows were a couple of crooks when I saw you walking about my houses. It's lucky for you I did not have a gun, or I might have taken a shot at you."

"Oh, I don't know," Hofstad is said to have replied with a laugh. "We probably would have had a battle. You know, I have a gun myself." As he said this he took his revolver from the holster. Instantly there was a flash and Gies staggered and fell. The bullet entered his neck and he was dead before a physician arrived.

Coroner Walter R. Jones was called from Hempstead after an investigation. He decided to permit Hofstad to remain at liberty, to appear when wanted at the inquest which is to be held on March 18th.

Hofstad was so overcome by the death of Gies that he was able to tell but little, but from Lutz and Gies' brother-in-law the coroner learned enough to satisfy him that the shooting was entirely an accident. Hofstad has been on the police force about nine years.

Gies was 38 years old. He had built several houses here and made much money. He leaves a wife and two children.

Is your skin pale and sallow?

—How you can rouse it

ONCE a week before retiring, fill your basin with almost boiling water. Bend over the basin, covering your head with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for 30 seconds.

Now lay a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap and with this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin. Rinse with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing your face for 30 seconds with a piece of ice.

The first time you use this treatment, you will notice a marked improvement in your complexion. The Andrew Jergens Company.

AMERICAN VIEW

OF LLOYD GEORGE

(New York Evening Post.)

Reports of an intention or a threat on the part of Lloyd George to resign and break up the Coalition are of good omen for Ireland, for Egypt, for India, and for Europe as a whole. This does not mean that the aspirations of Ireland, Egypt, India, and the needs of Europe are confronted with an obstacle in the person of Lloyd George, but quite the contrary. If the premier is to go, it is a very safe presumption that he will not go until the Irish Free State has begun to walk, until a settlement has been made with Egypt, until the way to reconciliation has been found in India, and, possibly, until the groundwork has been laid for reconstruction in Europe. In other words, Lloyd George has his ambitions, and it is not likely that the slightest inflection upon him by the chief Conservative whip or the pin pricks from mutinous Conservative die-hards will bustle the great Welshman into retirement before he has supplemented his notable war record with an equally great record in the reconstruction and pacification of the British Empire.

For some time to come Lloyd George is still entitled to regard himself as indispensable. He is indispensable because of his signal virtues. He is indispensable because of those prominent defects which his opponents have not failed to emphasize. What his friends call resourcefulness and his opponents call lack of principle, what his friends call open-mindedness and his opponents call irresolution, have been useful qualities during several years of vast change and unrest; and will continue to be useful for some months yet. During the debates in the Dail on the ratification of the Irish treaty Michael Collins made use of a striking phrase: He appealed to De Valera for a compromise which should leave De Valera free to maintain his principles while "we do the dirty work." Collins was not thinking of moral but of physical dirt; he was thinking of the hard, grinding, practical business of compromise and routine which is part of the essential business of government. So Lloyd George for the British Empire has been doing a great deal of dirty work—thinking, working, blustering, coddling, taking his stand on the eternal principles today and executing masterly retreats tomorrow; in other words, governing.

At a meeting of Coalition Liberals some time ago Lloyd George taunted his opponents. They denounced him as unfit to rule and implored him, for heaven's sake, to stay in office. That situation bids fair to continue for some time to come.

BETTER THAN HARD COAL

Soft coal so free from soot that it does not make whisksers on stove covers or pipe and does not mat or cake when burning, is far better than Hard Coal for general household use. Quicker to light, takes less to make a fire, cheaper in price and can also be used for open fires and small heating stoves. Such a coal is Broad Cove soft coal. The main thing is to insist on getting the genuine article. No other soft coal burns just like Broad Cove. You will know it by the above characteristics.
