Statistics of the British ministry of food, given by the Bankers' Trust Co., New York, show that about forty-five per cent of the principal foodstuffs consumed in Great Britain during 1920 were of home production. Larger quantities of beef and veal, butter, oats and barley were produced at home than were imported, but the reverse applied to wheat, mutton and lamb, bacon and ham, and cheese. The estimated consumption was more than 1,000,000 tons, but more fresh meats and less grain were consumed. The details are as follows: British Home-grown Food Supply, 1920. P. C. 1,000 Tons Home Consumed. Wheat 6,715 18
Barley 1,950 62

IRON, STEEL, METAL AND MACHINERY MARKET

The general tone of business in the machine tool, steel and iron markets is slightly better this week. This does not mean that any great amount of bookings are being made, but it does mean that more orders are being received by several lines, and that in others inquiries of a perfectly reliable sort are being received.

In a good many lines it is still true that prices are not allowed to stand in the way of orders being placed. Small tools and some lines in the steel warehouses are going out under these circumstances. Here is a peculiar situation, though, which is developing. Warehouses have not been buying for some time. They have been busy liquidating the stock they had in hand, depending on the mills to give them quick delivery on the lines they were running short of. During the last week it has developed that some warehouses have lines in demand, while others have not, with the result that there is no more losing liquidation on the part of the firms that have the wanted lines. They are able to sell at a profit.

Nothing definite is heard in regard to prices in the steel market coming down any further. The Corporation schedule still stands, and its selling agencies in Canada are working on that basis, but the independents are coming pretty well under the mark. It is doubtful, though, if much real business has been brought into the market by any of the price slashing that has taken place.

The scrap metal market does not improve. Any movement at all for dealers feel that it has about run its limit as far as low prices are concerned. Some of the railroads and industrial in United States continue to offer their scrapings at lower prices, preferring to turn them into cash. The result is that, although prices are very low, there is no guarantee that they have yet touched bottom.

ature, so Premier Oliver informed a delegation representing the union of British Columbia municipalities here on Saturday. The government will continue its plan to allow the municipalities half of all liquor profits, but realizes that this revenue alone is not sufficient to cover the needs of the municipalities. An investigation into the present financial system as it affects the province and the municipalities will be made.

THIRTEEN ARE HURT IN COLLISIONS IN NEW YORK

New York, March 28.—Thirteen persons were injured in two rear-end collisions here on Saturday night. Nine were hurt when a southbound Third Avenue elevated train crashed into another discharging passengers at the 42nd street station. A collision earlier in the evening between two Manhattan bound cars on the Queensboro bridge resulted in injuries to four persons, the motorman of the second car being so severely hurt his leg had to be amputated.
