THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Don't Carry Water

You need never carry another pail of water or even go out of the house to draw any. Filtering water in your home—on the kitchen—bathroom—bed— and have an adequate supply in the bath or washing room—washing carriage, bathroom—for the lawn, garden—or for protection against fire—bombs. A Leader Water System makes this possible. It strains the naturally filtered water back that comes in. It is never over or under. The compressed air in a Leader Water System does all the work. It never sputters or bubbles in the ground. It is clean, and it is the water problem solver. A complete system costs $40. It operates and you can install it yourself. It pays for itself.

Let us show you how a Leader Water System in your home will save you money—in doctor's bills, and add to your own comfort and satisfaction in the same time.

A Leader Water System installed in the month of your home will never get out of order or need repairs. A few minutes attention each day is all that the system requires.

Smallest Man in Canada Dead.

Edward Hapman, probably the smallest man in Canada, died at his home in Altondale, Shelburne County, Thursday, May 26th.

He was thirty-eight years of age. His height was about two feet, nine inches, and he weighed thirty pounds. He had been ill for about five months with stomach trouble, but the immediate cause of death was paralysis with which he was stricken on Sunday.

Both Mr. Hapman and his parents were always adverse to his appearing on exhibit, but when the Dominion Exhibition was held in Halifax four years ago he appeared there in company with his sister, who is now about twenty years of age and of exceedingly small stature. The deceased possessed a good school education, and while he had his health was a constant reader and was well versed in public questions.

A Timely Warning.

According to the postal law now in force newspaper publishers can hold for trial anyone who takes a paper from the post office and refusing payment, and the man who allows subscriptions to remain unpaid and then orders a postmaster to send notifications of discontinuance to the publishers, lays himself liable to arrest and fine. Postmasters are also liable under the law, for cost of papers delivered to other persons after the death or removal from their office district of the person to whom the paper was first addressed.

Digital Superfluity.

"Turn on the light, Abelson!"
Thus, in clear, cutting, metallic accents spoke Mrs. Rambo, leaning over the railing at the top of the stairs.
"Thank you, I'm trying to do so."

Canada's Part in the Play of Peace

The loud and lofty talk of Canadian jingoism may win rounds of empty applause at the irresponsible smoking concert in Toronto, but he is neither intelligent nor rational who does not perceive that on this American continent the country of over ninety millions of people has it in its power to inflict serious injury on the country of little more than seven millions. It becomes the country of the lesser population to get on growing legs and to keep a civil tongue in its head. It is well that the blatant jingo is not taken seriously. Canadians are learning the proper Anglo-Saxon habit of letting jingoism talk itself out, knowing that the thin air will swallow up its foolish vaporing. Not much harm will be done by allowing all sorts of wild talk about Canada's commercial independence of the United States. The talk is nonsense, but it need do no harm.

The time has gone by in the world's history when one civilized nation can cut itself off from trade intercourse with any other civilized nation except to its own hurt. Least of all can the two nations holding this North American continent afford to isolate themselves one from the other. No one but fools or pigmies would try to do it. Every instinct of civilization in both people approves the principle laid down by President Taft that these two countries with their more than three thousand miles of international boundary have trade interests in common with neither less or in the very nature of things can have with any other country in the world. And when the people of the United States come to their senses in the matter of freedom of trade they will find the people of Canada civilized enough to welcome such easy exchange of commodities as would serve the needs and promote the interests of both countries. In the meantime Canada's part, as the custodian of British traditions and British aspirations on this continent, is dignified enough to make Canadians self-respecting and is critical enough to make them serious. There is no place in Canada either for the fawning sycophant or for the arrogant braggart. By being true to what is best in their inheritance from Britain, and by holding themselves self-controlled and conciliatory, Canadians of to-day may weave the bands of mutual confidence and co-operation between Britain and the United States which will mean an Anglo-Saxon alliance for the peace of the world. To play that part would be greatly worth while.

Canada's part in the play of peace is to be a good neighbor, a good friend, and a good ally. It is to be a part of the world's peace, and to be a part of the world's progress. It is to be a part of the world's happiness, and to be a part of the world's glory.

Father had just climbed the step-ladder to take down the art works on the walls, preparatory to the arrival of the paper-hangers.

"This is what might be called a moving picture show at home," he said with a laugh that rattled the chandelier.

"Did Higgins enjoy himself at the banquet?"
"I'm afraid not. He was scared all the evening at the possibility of being called on for a speech, and when it was over resented the fact that he was overlooked."

"You don't amount to much."

"Tut, tut, father."

"I could paddle my own canoe at your age."

"Well, dad, I do pretty well for a rich man's son. I can operate my own motorboat."

"I don't like your heart action."

Jokers' Column

"Doctor, is it absolutely necessary to operate on me?"

"N—no. But it's customary."

He—Concerning love, everything possible has been said and thought.

She (cooly)—But not to me.

"They say he got rich quick."

"He did. His wealthy uncle died from heart disease."

He—One kiss is worth a hundred letters.

She—How silly you are.

He—Not at all. A kiss, you know, can't be shown in a breach of promise suit.

They had been courting just a week, and at last he ventured to ask her to go to a football match. He was pointing out the members. "Now, there's Johnson," he said; "in a few weeks he will be our best man." "Oh, George," she laughed, "this is so sudden."

Nan—The trouble in trying to entertain Clarence is his painful bashfulness. After you have talked yourself out there comes the inevitable awkward pause.

Fan—Awkward pause? I should say so! Why, if he even so much as touches our hair it all comes tumbling down.

STUPENDOUS BUSINESS

There are 233,000 miles of railway in the United States, and according to the figures published by the Bureau of Railway News and Statistics, Chicago, the cost of construction and equipment of these lines represents the vast total of $14,417,538,876, or $58,931 per mile of line. The gross earnings amounted last year to 12,443,512,000 and the operating expenses to $1,615,497,000. The ratio of expenses to earnings is 66.12. The rail ways carried 880,764,000 passengers and moved 1,456,000,000 tons of freight in the twelve months. The amount available for dividends after the reduction of the annual charges on the capital was $175,551,528, and the amount actually paid in dividends was $111,607,550.

Rooseveltisms

"Let us try to level up, but let us beware of the evil of leveling down."

"It is foolish to reject a proposal merely because it is advanced by visionaries."

"The good citizen will demand liberty for himself, and as a matter of pride he will see to it that others receive the liberty he thus claims for himself."

"The overbearing brutality of the man of wealth or power and the envious and hateful malice directed against wealth and power are really at root merely different manifestations of the same quality."

"Ruin looks us in the face if we judge a man by his position instead of judging him by his conduct in that position."

The Immigration Policy.

It is said in England that our immigration policy is a "dog in the manger" policy. This is not the case. What the authorities are aiming at, is to exclude those who have neither trades nor money to support themselves, and who are neither able nor anxious to take up their abode in Canada. Canada welcomes mechanics and agriculturists, for those are men who can support themselves. There is no room in Canada for hangers on we have too many of them already. It would seem that there is widespread misapprehension in Britain regarding the import of our new immigration regulations, and that it would be wise to have their meaning explained in detail in some of the prominent newspapers in the Old Country.

The British Medical Journal says that there has been a gradual decrease in the number of medical students throughout the United States. In the academic year 1908-09 the total number of students of medicine was 20,551, as against 21,011 in 1907-08, and 24,930 in 1902-03. This decline is somewhat remarkable, as it coincides with a period of financial prosperity increasing population and of constantly
