

Study on Manpower

inscribed in the record which is decisive but the number of members present at the time the original count was made.

It is very unfortunate, but I cannot see how I can reach any other conclusion than to apply the provisions of citation 60 and say that when the count was originally made there were fewer than 20 members in the house. If that is the situation, it seems to me

I have no alternative but to declare the adjournment of the house and invite hon. members to return in large numbers at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. I regret I have to reach this conclusion but I cannot see how I could expect continuing respect for the Chair without doing so.

At 5.38 p.m. the house adjourned.
