

street cars which, starting mostly from Yates Street, bring outlying parts of the city into easy reach of the business and shopping centres. The cars are commodious and well-lighted and run at short intervals to Burnside, Cloverdale, Esquimalt, Foul Bay, the Gorge, Hillside, Mt. Tolmie, Oak Bay, Fernwood, Uplands and Willows. And the Interurban Railway to Deep Bay (23 miles) brings the important and beautiful Saanich district into touch with the Capital City.

There is an excellent system of "Jitneys" (motor cars), which for five cents, the same price as the street cars, will take you quickly and comfortably to various quarters of the town as indicated by their placards.

Victoria makes ideal headquarters for motorists, who must almost think that the city has been paved for their individual comfort as they glide along their way to the great Island Highway, and the famous Malahat Drive. Robinson Crusoe had not a monopoly of the delights of exploring an Island, and
