HIS ADMIRERS WERE MANY

Mr. Steven's Fetching Appearance Caused 800 Damsels to Make Goo-Goos.

Then he Dilates Upon the Curiosity of the Fairer Sex and Their Failings.

"Women are curious, and no matter how much we may admire them both collectively and individually, we can't really shut our eyes to their failings in this respect," said N. H. Stevens this morning with a good-natured smile.

"I will give you an instance where I observed the great curiosity of woman as opposed to the little interest manifested by man under like conditions.

"I was in Allentown, Pa., and decided to have a look through one of the silk factories. The proprietors are very adverse to visitors and it was only after getting two orders from the superintendent, that I succeeded in seeing through the factory. There were 1,000 hands employed in the factory. Of this number 200 were men and 800 girls. As I went through the factory I don't believe more than 20 of the men saw me, while I will wager that every girl in the factory had a look at me and some of them more.

"The great danger is that when the employees remove their eyes from the work that they may spoil a whole piece of goods. That is why it is so hard to get an opportunity of seeing through the factory."

HIS OUTBURST

Dist of General Buller's Remarkable Reply to His Critics.

New York, Oct. 14.—A London special says: Speaking at a luncheon given in his honor by the King's Royal Rifles yesterday, Gen. Buller, who has been much criticised of late, expressed his condemnation of newspaper criticisms of "men who were doing their best and risking their lives for their country." He asserted that "nobody junior to himself was fitted to command the army corps," and he challenged his critics to name one.

Buller said he had been attacked on account of a telegram which was said to have been sent ordering G. A. White to surrender Ladysmith after his (Buller's) attack on Colenso, Dec. 15, 1899 had resulted in a defeat. Buller described at length his own and Gen. White's difficulties. He said that at that time he prepared a message telling White that his (Buller's) situation had failed, and he could not make another attempt to relieve him within a month in the then slow fighting.

Buller said he read this telegram over several times, saying to himself: "That's a mean thing to send a fellow," but he knew the responsibility was his, and that White could say, if he surrendered, that Buller advised it. The same telegram suggested that it might be necessary to surrender, and in that case Buller made some suggestions as to what White should do, and how he should be treated when he was taken to a man whom he believed to be in greater difficulties than himself.

Buller said the conduct of the fellows (meaning the newspaper men) who set in cockpits and attempted to besmirch the men who were on battlefields doing all they could for the cause of their country was nauseating. "I am sure nothing about armies or battles, and had never seen a real fight even at a distance."

ORDINATION

Services Were Held Yesterday for John Brennan, Jr., of Windsor.

Rt. Rev. Bishop McEvoy, of London, ordained John Brennan, Jr., of Windsor, son of the accountant in the Walkerville inland revenue office, into the priesthood in St. Alphonsus's church yesterday morning. Rev. Fr. McEvoy, of Assumption college, Sandwich, preached the sermon. The candidate was born in Guelph, 24 years ago. His primary education was received in the separate Catholic schools of Chatham and Windsor, and at the Windsor collegiate institute. Following seven years' study at Assumption college, he completed his college course by studying theology for two years in the Grand seminary in Montreal.

CHURCH WANTS AWAKENING

Earnest Address by Rev. Mr. Wallace at First Presbyterian Anniversary.

Believes Prosperity is Injuring Religion—Excellent Sermon and Splendid Music.

"A persecuted church never dies. The hammer may be worn out, but the anvil remains. It is prosperity, easy in Zion, and worldliness which are killing the church today. The time is coming when all of this worldliness shall be put under foot and the church will have to awake to the spirit of the cause of Christ."

These words were spoken by Rev. W. G. Wallace, M. A., B. D., of Bloer St. Presbyterian church, Toronto, who preached the anniversary services in the First Presbyterian church yesterday. His text was taken from Ephesians, 1:23—"Which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all" and he went on to show that Christ is the head of the church, and that everything done by the church should be according to His will. His subject was true religion.

"I do not purpose to discuss church government," continued he, "I wish to get at something deeper, and more vital."

"Is the church to-day fulfilling the purpose of its existence and doing what the Master intended it to do?"

"We notice that the church is gradually having a larger interest in missionary work. It is a good thing for there is much land to be possessed. But what about our own districts. If we stop to consider, we cannot help noticing that the moral muscles of the coming generation is not so strong as that of previous ones. Things are held sacred and played with fast and loose. The moral convictions are no so strong—in fact, the world seems to be gradually becoming worse."

"This is not as it should be. Christ is the head and the church is the body. Just as the head contains the life of the church. When that life comes, it increases our faith, and makes it more like what God would have us. The secret of that life is unity between the head and the body. Just as the body cannot live without the head, neither can the church live without Christ. We should be one in aim, purpose, hope and spirit."

One great condition which is killing the church, is that we have dead men in the pulpit, and dead men in the pews. They do not enter into the spirit of Christ's teaching and have no earnestness of his appeals to them. What we need is the breathing of God's Spirit upon us, so that we may be again brought back to life, and in this way have a deeper sense of the mission which God has provided for the church.

"The church is a growing thing. We should grow in grace, if not in numbers. I am pleased to be able to congratulate this church on the progress it has made during the last year, and I hope that the time will soon come when the world will realize that there is but one Lord, one Faith, one baptism, and one God, the father of us all."

In the evening Rev. Mr. Wallace preached an excellent gospel sermon on the words, "We beseech His glory." The music rendered by the choir was of a special nature, and was very appropriate. It included three anthems by the choir the solo parts in one of these being splendidly taken by Miss Gertrude Samsonville; a duet by Mrs. Cooper and Miss Ada Ross, and solos by Misses Ada Ross and Jessie Taylor.

AT REST

Grand and Impressive Funeral Pageant to the Late N. Clarke Wallace.

Woodbridge, Oct. 12.—The funeral of the late Hon. N. Clarke Wallace, Grand Master of the Orange Order for British America, took place here this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and was attended by friends of Mr. Wallace and by representatives of the Orange Order from all parts of Ontario and from other parts of the country as well. About 1,200 brethren were present from Toronto alone. The funeral services were conducted by the Orange Order throughout, the chief parts of the service being assigned to Rev. Wm. Walsh, of Brampton, Grand Chaplain of British America; Rev. H. C. Dixon, of Toronto, Grand Chaplain of Ontario West, and T. S. Sprague, M. P., Markham, Deputy Grand Master, who by the death of Mr. Wallace becomes Grand Master of British America. The remains were first removed from Mr. Wallace's late residence to the church and thence to the grave, services being held at all three places by the Order.

"We were very much pleased with the design you sent. It was beautiful and appropriate." The Victoria Ave. Greenhouses receive such words of commendation every day. Telephone No. 151.

CHATHAMITE IN WINNIPEG

The Free Press Discusses The Planet Correspondent's Impressions.

What Mr. Young Saw in the Superficial Bird's Eye View of the Tourist.

Under the caption, "An Easterner's Impressions of the West," the Winnipeg Free Press of Tuesday last says editorially:—

A series of rapidly written articles descriptive of Western Canada have been appearing in The Chatham Planet for some time from the pen of Mr. J. W. Young, a staff correspondent of that journal, recently enroute in this country. His first letter on "Ralph Connor at Home," in which he describes Winnipeg as seen from the standpoint of tenderfoot is especially interesting. He was greatly impressed at first sight with the sign "Citizens protect your boulevards," which is the up-to-date rendition of the mandate of the effete east, "keep off the grass."

He was equally impressed with the gruesomeness of the advertisements of some undertakers who display their fittings of the dead in all publicity, which is dramatically opposed to eastern etiquette, and probably to good taste. Quite as impressive to him was the great number of hotels in evidence for it is difficult for a tenderfoot to realize that a constantly growing population, and especially the gateway city to a new and rapidly filling country, requires an extraordinary amount of accommodation.

The points of interest in Winnipeg and St. Boniface, such as Fort Garry, the battlefield of Seven Oaks and the grave of Louis Riel are all duly dwelt upon. His interview with Rev. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) is of particular interest. They had met before, as Mr. Gordon at one time was science master in the Chatham High School.

After detailing incidents relative to the meeting in the manse the correspondent has this to say of Winnipeg's gifted story teller:—

"After I had left, I realized the great personality of the man. Those who had heard him preach had told me that Mr. Gordon was not much of an orator, but he had a wonderful power in holding his congregation during his sermon. To meet the man you could well believe this. He is a man of ordinary height, but rather slight in build. His hair and beard are inclined to be dark. He looks a man in the prime of life, yet delicate—a man who might have written 'Sky Pilot,' or who might be the pastor of a mission church on the outskirts of a great city. His personality doesn't intrude into the conversation and you leave his presence feeling that you have met a great man, yet nothing more than a fellow being. No greater tribute can I pay anyone."

With a brief reference to the city's public and educational institutions, etc., and a passing criticism of the fire alarm system, he sizes up the situation thus:—

"Winnipeg is really a charming city and its wide, clean streets, stately public buildings and many pretty residences make it a very pleasant place indeed. It is certainly an odd city in many ways, bounded on all sides by prairie, situated hundreds of miles from any other large city, still you find all the advantages and conveniences here of a great modern city. It just seems as if a huge portion of civilization had just trokked off into the world beyond, and settled far from friends and kin. It is certainly a remarkable city in more ways than one. I believe nearly every nation, from the eastern Yankee to the Galician, live in Winnipeg. You see Italians, Hebrews, Germans, Doukhobors, Galicians thick as bees in a honey-comb."

His trip across the prairies and through the Edmonton country, amid "massive" fields of grain, comfortable homes, good roads and a general air of progress and prosperity were all a great revelation to him. The splendid observance of law and order even in the confines of the most remote settlements was a great surprise indeed to him.

Frank Oliver, M. P., "the father of Alberta," Mr. Young considers one of the most remarkable men in the town of Edmonton, which, by the way, is rapidly assuming all the evidences of permanency. It is the greatest far market in the world, occupying the position to that staple that Chicago does to wheat.

But after all Mr. Young has but had a superficial bird's eye view of this country with its almost incalculable resources and limitless areas which it is impossible for the mere facile pen to give any adequate idea of by means of information gained and scenes witnessed on a hurried trip.

There is no city like Winnipeg. It is different from any other great metropolis in situation, in composition, in everything. Winnipeg is a splendid city and one can have a very pleasant time there.

The great influx of harvesters and the lack of arrangement for their proper distribution are pictured quite realistically, while "one of the features" of the city which forced its prominence upon him as an observant stranger was the great departmental store of the Hudson's Bay Co.
