other hand, the savage has very little consideration for the white man. He is mainly valued for his delicious flesh, particularly among the cannibal.

We are all fellows working for a common end. We are trying to lay the foundation here for the future homes of our children and their children's children. This is our sacred task. Let us co-operate for even greater neighborliness than we boast at present. Love is the moving power of the world. When strangers come in amongst us let us make them love our neighborhood. We want them and we need them. We must have many more good families. A homesteader or settler who comes here has friends who attach him to his old home. He will make his home with us permanently if we can win him for our community. A man lives not by bread alone. A person will eventually stay where he can be the happiest. Neighborliness alone spells contentment. A neighbor is the most precious asset we have. Let us guard our friendships sacredly.

Country Homemakers

cross, the sign I was no longer classed with infants, idiots, criminals and Indians. I was cold and hungry and worried about the horse, so probably my emotions wouldn't rise the same as if conditions had been different. How did we get home? 'Jim' was in no condition to travel, so we just stopped at a friend's house, not far from the polling booth. This friend is well used to doctoring horses, and my husband and he poured colic medicine down poor 'Jim' and worked over him all the afternoon. But 'all's well that ends well.' They pulled him thru and we got home safe and sound that night.

"Yes, we voted the liquor stores out all right! But look at this, and this! What are they? Liquor lists with prices! And about every week one comes in our mail. Now, do you think that's giving us a fair deal. What use is it after all for us to drive out the stores when these price lists come every week or so, making it so easy to get the poison?"

"But, mark my words, the hand that rocks the cradle will now feel constrained to put a cork—one that fits tight—in that hole in the wall thru which the liquor comes gushing out for the thirsty souls of Saskatchewan."

"How can we manage it? I don't just know, but something must be done. The Federal government will have to pass a law prohibiting the manufacture, sale and importation of intoxicating liquors. We must start a campaign and bomb the trenches, or benches in this case, at Ottawa. As they say in the Salvation Army, 'Now, all ready, fire a volley.' Will Sir Robert Borden help? No, indeed, not unless we all take a hand in the fracas and force him to do so. He has a wonderful chance, a chance such as seldom comes to a man, to do a grand thing for his country, a thing which would make thousands rise up and call him blessed. It's up to the voters of Saskatchewan to work hard and plug up the loose holes or, better still, fight for prohibition for Canada."

"Must you go now? Well, I won't coax you to stay, for I know how soon it gets dark on the trails and you're alone. We must talk this over again at our next Grain Growers' meeting."

"Good-bye, come over again soon. Good-bye."

NORMA.

This letter came in too late for the contest on voters' experiences, but we thought it would interest our readers.

STICK TOGETHER

"This is the law of the jungle,
As old and as true as the sky,
And the wolf that keeps it must prosper,
But the wolf that breaks it must die.
As the ivy that girdeth the tree trunk;
This law runneth forward and back,
For the pack is the strength of the wolf,
And the wolf is the strength of the pack."
