COLORS OF 215TH FORMALLY DEPOSITED IN GRACE CHURCH

Ceremony Performed Yesterday Afternoon in Presence of Large Gathering; Reverence and Devotion Characterized the Rites Enacted

"O God our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come;
Be Thou our refuge from the blast,
And our eternal home."

The glint of steel and the rattle of musketry within the sacred precincts of Grace church yesterday afternoon struck eye and ear alike by their presence in that abode of prayer on the occasion of the depositing of the colors of the 215th battalion. Yet indeed, in an other manner might be seen so striking an evidence of the harmony of spirit and the sympathy of ideals existent to-day between the churches of Christianity and the British army and the cause for which it battles. Co-ordination, approval, consecration, all of these the church showers upon the colors of the empire, and with a spirit of reverence and solemnity accordingly, yesterday afternoon's ceremony, was signalized throughout.

The Parade.

Parading at the armories at 3.30, the 215th battalion was called to order, and set out upon its procession throughout the streets of the city, under the gaze of an ever-gathering number of spectators. Reading the McKelvey, the band, then an armed guard, with rifles and fixed bayonets, in their centre marched Lts. Ryan and Sutherland, bearing the colors of the battalion. Followed then the staff officers of the battalion, together with Lt.-Col. Harry Cockshutt, honorary colonel of the battalion, and others, then the unit at full strength and under the command of the various company officers. Parading by way of Colborne street, Queen street, Dalhousie, King and Albion, the battalion halted at the east door of the church, where a pause of considerable length ensued. The ceremony of knocking thrice at the door, and asking permission for the armed troops to enter, was performed by Capt. Tyrwhitt, adjutant, and responded to by the rector of the church, Rev. J. B. Fotheringham, the battalion chaplain, Capt. the Rev. S. D. McKelvey, and other members of the Anglican clergy of the city. Entering the church, amid the strains of the processional hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers," the battalion occupied the seats of the centre aisle, followed by the singing of the National anthem. The presentation of colors was then observed, the standards being received from the hands of their bearers by F. W. Frank and F. J. Bishop, church wardens, and deposited upon the altar, amid the following form of prayer.

Of Cler.: In the Name of our God, we will set up our banners.
Resp: The Lord is our strength, we will not be afraid.
Of Cler.: Now know I that the Lord saveth His anointed.
Resp: He will hear him from His heaven with the saving strength of His right hand.

Of Cler.: Some trust in chariots, and some in horses.
Resp: We will remember the name of the Lord, our God.
Special prayers by the rector and the singing of the hymn "The Song of God" were followed by brief addresses in turn from Lt. Col. Harry Cockshutt, Ald. S. A. Jones, acting-mayor, and Rev. J. B. Fotheringham, rector.

Of Lt. Col. Cockshutt: "Upon the last occasion, when our battalion was gathered around our colors that sunny morning at Niagara Camp, we all looked forward hopefully to the day when we might go overseas as a full unit." Thus Lt. Col. Cockshutt happily opened his exhortation to the battalion, a brief address brimming over with the enthusiasm, the optimism and confidence in the future, and the desire to serve, so characteristic of the man.

"Fate has willed otherwise," he continued, "but we may perform our part in this great struggle for Liberty as well in companies as in battalions.
"The stirring events of the last few days have thrilled us all and we as Canadian citizens can well be proud of the part which our men have taken in the capture of Vimy ridge. Signs are not wanting that the German barbarians are being pushed back like a pack of snarling hyenas.

"It is a great work you are undertaking my men, and our prayers go up to the Great God above us, for your success and that you may return to us again, crowned with honor and glory in the part which you have played in this great struggle.

"It is a work that calls for intense action, whole hearted devotion and obedience to duty.
"The Colors which you have deposited here to-day will be carefully guarded to await your home coming, but while you leave them in this ground, the church, the emblem of our country goes with you—the Flag of Old England, which stands for Liberty, Civilization, our Honor, our Heritage, our Glory.
"May God be with you till we meet again."

"We are proud of our soldiers," declared Ald. Jones, "we are proud of the spirit which has animated them in taking the great vow of sacrifice for King and Country, for the flag of the Empire, nay, more; sacrifice for the generations yet unborn, for the freedom of the world. You go, as they have gone, forward of your own accord, imbued and dominated by the spirit of Horatius of old expressed in those immortal words:
"And how can man die better than facing fearful odds,
For the ashes of his fathers and the temples of his Gods?"

The speaker went on to pay tribute to the honorary colonel of the battalion, who at the call of duty had laid aside his business duties, had offered his own services to the country and had given unsparingly of his time to the care and welfare of the battalion in the raising of which he was so prominent. The depositing of the colors of the battalion in that holy place was emblematic of the spirit of the regiment, whereby the lives of its soldiers were placed under the protection of the Almighty.

"Officers and men of the 215th battalion," declared the speaker, "the city of Brantford bids you adieu and goodspeed, and rests in full assurance that nobly you will uphold the honor of your native land."

Rev. J. B. Fotheringham

In spirit as well as by word of mouth, considered the Rev. J. B. Fotheringham, those present had participated in the ceremony enacted; they had seen the outward, the visible sign of the great things of our nation, knowing for what it has stood and for what it still stands today, honor, liberty and justice. Not in vain was it that the men of Canada had gone forward during the present struggle; not in vain had these worthy men followed in the footsteps of worthy sires, and added to the Empire's colors a new lustre which comes only from the sacrifice of the heart's blood. In laying these flags, the emblem of sacrifice, upon the altar, the place of sacrifice, the men of the battalion were pledging themselves as a sacrifice, and the speaker appealed to all to do likewise, to lay themselves and our lives and homes upon the altar of God and to beg Him to accept them, the sacrifice most like His own.

The speaker continued with a spirited and inspiring appeal to the men of the battalion to pledge themselves to remain true to the Empire in moments of stress and strain. New names destined to live forever were being written to-day upon the flag of the Empire, and with the 215th in turn it might rest to add more illustrious names; to go forward to victory for the love of justice, and of the great Empire to which they belonged and to stand with the city whence it came, and to stand whether in peace or war for purity, manhood, honor the things essential to our nation's life.

To all of us the memory of our soldiers was sacred; they might bring us joy and glory, they might bring us deep and great sorrow, but to all of us there would be the meed of glory that they had done their duty as men. "We bid adieu to you, men of the 215th battalion," concluded the speaker, "may God take safe to receive once more these colors, glorified in the sight of God and man by the deeds of valor you have wrought."

Concluding his exhortation, the rector invoked the benediction of heaven upon the colors and upon all those present, the service being then brought to a close by the singing of the immortal hymn "O God Our Help."

Wedding Bells

TANNER—WILLIS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. A. Willis, 53 St. George street, at 3 o'clock on Wednesday, April 11th, when their daughter, Ursula, was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to James Edward Tanner, son of Mr. John Tanner of Stirling, Ont. The bride, who looked charming in a gown of Brussels net over duchess satin, entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Armstrong. Miss Dora Arnold played during the signing of the register. The happy couple left on the six o'clock train for Toronto, Belleville, Stirling and points east. The bride travelled in a suit of navy serge with grey hat and shoes. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner will reside in Lancer, Sask.

LAST FAREWELL TO SIMCOE OFFICER

Lt.-Col. Pratt Tells of Funeral of Capt. Paulin
BODY SENT TO CANADA
For Interment in Home Town, Simcoe

Writing from England to his sister Miss M. Pratt, of this city, Lt.-Col. Pratt, of Simcoe, commanding officer of the 133rd Simcoe Battalion, tells of the manner in which the remains of the late Capt. Hilton Paulin, a Simcoe officer who succumbed recently to an attack of appendicitis in the old land, were sent from England upon the trip to Canada for interment. Lt.-Col. Pratt's letter in part reads:

"I have just returned from our last parade with all that is mortal of poor Captain Paulin. We started him on his long lone trip to Simcoe this morning. A special escort party of one hundred men, nearly all Norfolk boys, was detailed from his own company and we paraded to the hospital. There his body was borne from the little mortuary on the shoulders of six stalwart Captains, fellow officers from the 3rd Reserve Battalion, and placed on a gun carriage and draped with the flag for which he gave his life. Then with arms reversed the party wound down the side of the cliff to the slow cadence of the Dead March. No more impressive funeral could be imagined. The six black chargers hauling the gun carriage, the muffled drums, the wailing dirge, the slow moving escort and his fellow officers following him in reversed order, junior officers just behind, the Colonel of the 3rd Reserve and 133rd in the rear, all marching down the side of the cliff to the streets of Sandgate. Then along the beach of the sea, the dull murmur of the waves mingling their requiem with strains of the band until the station was reached. Here the cast of the body was borne between the lines of his sorrowing men standing with arms at the 'present' and our last salute to our beloved fellow officer was given as the train moved on. We have sent him home from old and historic camping grounds. Above us lay Caesar's old camp ground. Not far away from the old battle field, the whole country side teams with historic interest and for centuries these old hills and this quiet sea have looked on warriors passing to the last long sleep. And today as we Norfolk boys followed our favorite officer down the cliff to the sea and saw him depart for the home of his loving mother, our hearts went out in heartfelt sympathy to the lonely wife and heart-broken son away in that far off country. We shall miss him, and we shall grieve for him for he was a nature that attracted friends and friendships. But our loss is light compared to the bereavement of his wife and son. The 133rd will doubtless have other losses both of officers and men. But the 'Norfolk Own' will never lose a more capable officer or one more widely esteemed and loved by all with whom he came in contact. We are greatly interested in the present offensive in France just now it looks as though we clearly had the mastery."

SOLDIERS RAN RIOT IN TORONTO

Hundreds of Khaki Clad Men Joined in Huge Demonstration
AGAINST ALIEN FOES
Restaurants Damaged in Search for Austrians

Toronto, April 13.—Their ranks swelled at times by upward of one thousand curious civilians seven hundred soldiers ran amuck in downtown Toronto last night, and for two hours and a half held the central part of the city under control. All semblance of order and discipline was swept away in what was at once a regrettable, humorous and enlightening lesson in mob psychology. Half a dozen downtown cafes were raided by self-constituted authorities in search of the alien enemies, and upon the Richmond, Yonge and King streets was held up, and as rumors of riot spread through the district a great many cafes temporarily closed their doors. The King Edward Hotel, Toronto's best known hostelry, was visited by a hundred soldiers, and as many more followers in mufti. Child's cafe was for one hour the centre of the disturbance, and dishes, chairs and tables were smashed in the fracas. Joseph Felice, the cafe's Italian chef, was assumed to be an alien enemy, and upon his head was visited the wrath of the soldiers, and a shower of plates, which latter visitation necessitated the application of one order of steak to a badly-bruised eye. Three employees in the kitchen were taken by the soldiers on the assumption that they were Austrians, and were rescued from mob violence by the city detectives, and hurried to the sanctuary of the City Hall offices of the detective force. Pickets thrown out by militia headquarters and under the general command of Major Gen. Logan took up positions at the main intersections of the streets in an effort to round up the rioters, but in their march from cafe to cafe the mob swept by these insufficient forces, and the disturbance ended only when the crowd had expended its energy. Captain Alex. Sinclair, Provost Marshal of Toronto, was the first representative of authority to appear on the scene of the disturbance. Assisted by another officer he sought to intercept the men as they swept up Yonge street from Child's with the object of raiding Young's Cafe, at the corner of Yonge and Queen streets. His commands and pleadings were ignored. He followed that part of the mob that managed to swarm into the cafe and ordered all men in uniform to face about and march into the street. This command was met with open derision. Meanwhile an employee of the cafe had assured the soldiers that there were no alien enemies in employment there, and the soldiers set out again to Queen street with the provost marshal borne unwillingly in their midst. On the street he again gave orders that all men in khaki disband, and the soldiers swarming about him, sought to bear him down. They cut at him with riding-sticks and swagger-sticks, and swept him from one side of the street to another in the very vortex of the disturbance. Eventually he secured some ascendancy, more in the nature of a compromise than by virtue of superiority in rank.
