That Invalid's Port Wine.

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN:

Mr. Editor:—It is always a source of gratification, if nothing more, to a person who has been the subject of wanton injury inflicted on account of the discharge of the duties of an office, to find the course taken by him the subject of subsequent justification.

A friend has sent me the following clipping from a Western newspaper:

'That invalid port wine cannot be considered a temperance drink and that its sale by druggists can be legally carried on only under the regulations governing the sale of other alcoholic drinks, is the effect of the decision in the court today when on prosecution by the Saskatchewan Provincial police, C. J. McIntosh, representative of the Parisian Wine Company, was fined $100 and costs for selling liquor without a license. The Proprietary Medicines Act provides that in no medical preparation may alcohol be present in a larger quantity than is necessary to preserve or dissolve the ingredients. It is stated that practically all the invalid ports offered for sale contain alcohol to excess of this amount.'

This I am advised is the first judicial deliverance in Canada on the abstract question of the intoxicating character of the liquor known as Invalid Port Wine and of the legality of its sale as a patent medicine. The decision may not be very pleasant reading for Dr. Covert or Mr. Wick, wire but notwithstanding all that, I think it is due to my friends who have so nobly stood for my defence in the injustice meted out to me no less than to myself, that it should be made public through the press of this County and Province.
