Mr. Foster's Policy. The manocuvre was engineered by Mr. Foster in the absence of Mr. Bor-den and local papers interpret it as an attempt to knile Mr. Borden as his pre-decessor was kniled in 1896 by proving the superior capacity of the lieuten-ant from North Toronto. If so, the outcome is not likely to aid the plot for it ended in the discomfiture of Mr. Foster and the general demoraliza-tion of his associates. The manocuvre was engineered by Mr. Foster's Policy. But last week's manoeuvre throw these all in the shade. Unfortunately the complete ridiculousness of it wil never be known to the public becaus e Hansard reporters worn out by ss of sleep were unable to record the detailed nonsense which filled the weary hours of the night-and fre quently when on duty the puerility of remarks was too apparent to jus tify the expense of reporting and Reports early in the debate show that the Opposition had no intention of being so dictatorial, but as the arof being so dictatorial, but as the ar-gument advanced they placed them-selves on record that they would not grant Brodeur a dollar of estimates. The contention of the government was the usual one that non-contentious items should be passed and disputed items held over for future considera-

This was in Mr. Foster's mind early the debate too for he said :--"There is a little dispute on the item "for the maintenance and repairs to "government steamers and ice-break-'ers, but we may let these items pass, with the exception of the one now called, on the understanding that a general discussion will be allowed on the items later. Again, he announced that "the reso-'lution is not passed. So far as I am "concerned, all I would require is to 'hold over that item and let the oth-"ers go through, on the understand-"ing that there should be a general cussion allowed later, and ally with reference to the 'Arctic. Soon, however, the honorable gentleman got lost in his oratory and declared the purpose of the Opposition to not pass any item of the estimates, non-contentious or otherwise, until the information demanded on the conten-tious items was produced. This doctrine Mr. Foster enunciated as fol-"We would therefore be perlows fectly right in refusing to pass "single item until we have these two "essentials fully explained to us." EDMONTON BULLETIN, 3 1 FRIDAY, MARCH 13, 1908.

Mr. Brodeur-1 do not think that document has been brought before the House in the regular way, but I would be very glad to bring down a copy. My hon, friend (Mr. Foster) was so anxious to see the report of the historian that he would not wait for a copy being made and I thought for a copy being made and I thought forts to justify last week's absurd ob-I would show him the original in order to let him see that the docu-ment existed notwithstanding the fact that I had assured him that there was such a document. Since we have been on this superior new results of the superior of the super there was such a document. Since we have been on this question per-haps I may call the attention of the hon, gentleman to a little incident that happened last night. He stated that I had "stolen" from an appro-priation a certain amount of money and that I had applied this money to another purpose. As a matter of fact the hon, gentleman knows per-fectly well the circumstances. There was an appropriation for an icc-breaker. I was going to travel abroad in connection with an icc-breaker and an amount of money to another purpose is a substances. There was an appropriation for an icc-breaker and an amount of money abroad in connection with an icc-breaker and an amount of money in bringing down returns asked for. It is not worth while going into this the merest pretence. The attitude to the Government had been concilia-tory from beginning to end. Mr. Bro-deur proposed more than once that any item about which more informa-tion was required should stand over while the House proceeded to the non-breaker and an amount of money while the House proceeded to the nonwas taken out of the ice-breaker contentious items. These proposals were obstinately rejected by the little vote to pay my expenses. My hon. friend stated that it was a bad thing to do, that it was a "steal;" that was the language that he used in regard to me. He said I had "stolgroup which is leading the Opposition into all its present follies. Mr. Borden very studiously remainregard to me. He said I had "stol-ent" money from that appropriation and applied it to another purpose. I called his attention this morning to the fact that perhaps he was guilty of the same thing some years ago.
