united in saying that the defeat of Germany and Austria-Hungary is in-evitable even without the participation of Italy. In case Italy refrains from taking part, she will receive nothing from the Allies when the settlements are made. They advance the further argument that with the conclusion of peace, or shortly thereafter, the separation of Hungary from Austria is quite to be expected. This would lead to the absorption of the Austrian provinces of German nationality by Germany and the consequent extension of German dominion to Triest, which thus would election. forever be lost to Italy. In addition, Italy would be forced to abandon Sir Wilfrid's reference to the failure no ground for action by the federal Avlona and the Aegean Islands.

Criticizes Amendment. Almost at the opening of his speech a want of confidence motion, and that the proposals of the Opposition leader were merely negative, he believed amounted to a declaration that Canada should not take her fair share in the war. There were cries of "No" and "Shame" from the Liberals, and aplause from the Government side at this statement. The Liberal leader, said Sir Robert, had attempted arouse feeling in this country which would set class against class at a time when there should be harmony. He had charged the Government with be-

He censured and denied Sir Wilfrid's charge that the new taxation proposals of the Government was a free trader out of office, and a protectionist in office; that he had a free trade leg and a protectionist leg Sir Robert repeated the argument of Sir George Foster, that nder the new tariff the British manufacturer had been given increased preference because the duties had been The control of the cont raised only five per cent against British while they had been raised seven and a half per cent against foreign goods entering Canada. He frankly declared that the tariff increases were for the purpose of giving the manufacturers more protection, and said that unless the people wanted to see the Canadian factories closed in large numbers there had to be additional protection given at this time. Revenue had to be and to raise it the Government had to borrow or to tax; the more they taxed the less they would have to borrow. Sir Robert declared that the action of the Liberal majority in the senate in killing the Government naval bill had given great satisfaction to the Germans, and quoted a Hamburg paper to Sir Robert's Flop. That in England the Opposition had really been consulted by the Government in regard to all legislative proposals was declared by Mr. F. B. Carvell, who followed.
