The number of births in this city in recent months has been higher than ever, but this is said to be due to the fact that the population of Paris has been augmented by 500,000 persons during the last year. The percentage of births per thousand of the population is said to be the vital test, and it is lower at present, than it was before the outbreak of the war in 1914.

"I think the city would do well to encourage its citizens to take the arts course at the university," said the mayor. "I am not so anxious about the medical department, because education along that line is more of a direct ivestment, and not much urging is needed to take advantage of it. But we might apply it to the medical school as well. It would be a good investment for the city."

Ald. Harley thought that the tuition fees did not bar pupils from the university so much as the cost of board and clothing.

"Perahps not, but the tuition fees are just another straw on the load," replied the mayor. "In many cases the pupils live at home, and the board and clothing is not such a consideration as if they were boarding in Toronto or some other university centre. If the fees are removed, I think a good many would be encouraged to attend. I don't think we are going to get much more assistance from the government until we do something for the university ourselves."

The chief, however, kept his office door locked, for there stood the pile of booze valued at over $1,400. In the case against Hanney, Mr. Meredith submitted the argument that if he were guilty then a telegraph operator or an employee of his majesty's mail would be guilty if an order were sent to Montreal. The magistrate held that Hanney had received an order and was therefore guilty under the meaning of the act. Mr. Meredith pointed out that the temperance act was so constructed as to prevent agents from working for breweries, etc. It should be used with common sense judgment and not construed so as to create a trap for every private individual.
