THE KNIGHTS AT RHODES
By George Ripley Stewart, Jr.

Northward we look across the sea—
The ridges rolling rolling.
And southward to the Turkish lines—
The guns a death-knell tolling.

Will Genoa not send the fleet,
Nor yet one lonely galleon?
Will Christendom not lend a hand
To die in our last rally?

They stormed the outer wall to-day
The end will be to-morrow.
And not a Christian sword has come
To aid us in our sorrow.

With Turk before and sea behind,
Cut off, betrayed, forsaken—
The guns a death-knell tolling.

What bend you then the knee to grace Or meet the fate unshaken.

But not! Fight on a greater fight What counts our little losses, If still against the infidel We plant our Christian crosses?

And this upon our tombstones write—Begrudge us not our story—They died in fighting Christ's own fight And this alone is glory!

The honor of our cloven mail—What similar can sever! Be men to-day for half an hour And heroes then—forever.
