CAUTION!

We caution the public against buying Alexandre's Kid Gloves without A. T. Stewart & Co.'s initials in each pair. Thousands of common Kid Gloves are sold in Montreal as Alexandre's, which are not worth more than half the price of genuine Alexandre's. A few years ago Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co. had an agent in Montreal to sell Alexandre's Kid Gloves, but they have no agent here now. Our 50c Two Button Kids will be found equal to what are generally sold in Montreal as Alexandre's.

The Rine Movement.

The lessening of the sale of whisky means the increasing of the sale of Rine Goods. If all the money that is spent in Montreal in excessive drinking were spent in clothing, then all the city would be decently and comfortably clad for the winter. Success to Mr. Rine and every one else who tries to make drunken men become sober men, or prevent sober men becoming drunkards.

POLITICAL HISTORY OF CANADA.

Government. I found on better acquaintance that I had no opinion in common with Mr. Neilson, who, from his age and experience had great influence in the councils of the Opposition party, and I found several of the Lower Canada British members as thoroughly liberal as I could wish. The resolutions recognizing responsible government were carried with only seven dissentients, four from Upper and three from Lower Canada. Mr. Neilson did not vote, but he was an avowed opponent of the principle, and before another year had expired was openly in the Conservative ranks. Towards the end of session Lord Sydenham met with the accident which caused his premature death. He was succeeded, after an interval of a few months by Sir Charles Bagot. In June, 1842, I was invited to accept the office of Inspector-General and as I had considered it my duty to support the principal measures of the Government during the preceding session, and as I felt bound, under existing circumstances, to cast my lot with those with whom I had entered into alliance, I did not hesitate to do so. All my leading supporters in the County of Oxford testified their approbation of my conduct by supporting me on the occasion of my re-election.

THE SECOND SESSION OF THE UNION.

About three months afterwards the second session of the United Canada was opened by Sir Charles Bagot. There was no material difference in the state of parties, though the Opposition had gained a few seats, and had been much strengthened by the return of Mr. Lafontaine, the leader of the French-Canadians, for the North Riding of York, in Upper Canada. Mr. Baldwin, who had a double return having vacated that seat, and having strongly recommended his Lower Canadian ally to the electors. The address in answer to the speech having been moved in due course, Mr. Baldwin proposed in amendment a vote of want of confidence. Mean-time negotiations had been commenced for the reconstruction of the administration. It cannot be denied that they were very clamorously managed. A written proposal was made to Mr. Lafontaine by the Governor, which he felt himself unable to accept, and in the course of the debate the Governor's letter was read by Mr. Attorney General Draper, who was able to make out a strong case for himself. He acknowledged with great frankness that he had at one time been prejudiced against the French-Canadians, but declared that the experience of the previous session had removed all his objections to acting with them. He admitted the necessity of introducing into the Government gentlemen possessing their confidence, and as he was aware that under existing circumstances they could not take office without Mr. Baldwin, he stated that he had more than once tendered his own resignation, in order that his office might be offered to Mr. Baldwin. There is no doubt that the leaders of the Opposition, Messrs. Lafontaine and Baldwin, were desirous of forcing the Ministry to resign, in the expectation that one of them would have been called on to form a new administration, and it is not improbable that if the Ministers had been weak enough to yield, such a result might have ensued. The Ministers, however, were firm on all essential points. They yielded so far on the proposed pensions to Mr. Ogden, the Attorney-General, whose office had been offered to Mr. Lafontaine, and to Mr. Davidson, the Commissioner of Crown Lands, as to consent that their new colleagues and their friends should vote as they pleased, but Mr. Turotte has fallen into an error in stating in his history that they retained their seats on condition of conforming to the policy of their new chiefs. No such stipulation, nor any other, except on the subject of the pension vote, was proposed. In giving a list of the Ministers, Mr. Turotte places Mr. Lafontaine's name at the head as "First Minister," exactly as it was properly placed in 1843. In 1842 Mr. Lafontaine, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Morin, Mr. Aylwin, and Mr. Small became members of the old Government, six members of which retained their offices and their precedence, without concessions of any kind, Mr. Withrow is still more inaccurate.

THE PRINCIPLE OF THE DOUBLE MAJORITY.

He states that even prior to the reconstruction "the principle of double majority, as it was called, was introduced." And why introduced? To counteract, he says, "the dominant influence" of the French members, who, numbering twenty-four "held the balance of power." Now, it so happens that the French-Canadians, instead of holding the balance of power, never had so little influence as during the first session of the first Parliament. This was owing to the disfranchisement of Montreal and Quebec, and to the elections carried by violence. The balance of power was held by the Reformers of Upper Canada, who generally supported the Government, but occasionally divided with Mr. Baldwin. A Government by "double majority," instead of counteracting the influence of the French-Canadians, would have been the means of securing it. Elsewhere, when referring to Mr. Baldwin's resignation in 1851, Withrow asserts that "since the union successive Ministers had succeeded in carrying their measures by a majority from each Province." The fact is that during the whole of the second Parliament the Government was sustained by a majority from Upper Canada acting with a Lower Canada minority. Mr. Baldwin's resignation is stated to have taken place "in obedience to this principle," but if a principle was at stake, all Mr. Baldwin's Upper Canada colleagues should likewise have resigned, and yet it was his own earnest request that they should not do so. Mr. Baldwin resigned because he was abandoned by almost the entire legal profession of Upper Canada, on a measure, the Court of Chancery, which he had himself carried through the Legislature, and for which he held himself personally responsible. I cannot make this allusion to that attacks frequently made against the late Chancellor Blake as having promoted the Chancery Act in order to provide a place for himself are most unjust. Mr. Blake was not a member of the Administration, and Mr. Baldwin himself was the author of the measure, which was imperatively demanded by the profession and the country. Mr. Blake, on doubt, rendered valuable aid to Mr. Baldwin in the framing of the bill, which was nevertheless introduced on the responsibility of the Government, and Mr. Baldwin especially, and I know that it was at Mr. Baldwin's earnest and pressing solicitations that Mr. Blake, at the very commencement of what promised to be a most brilliant political and professional career, consented to abandon it in order to take a post which no other man in the profession could have filled with so much advantage to the public. I have been glad of the opportunity of stating that up to the time of my leaving Canada in 1855, no political alliance was formed on the principle of securing majorities from the two Provinces. It was, of course, considered desirable that the Government should have a majority from each section in support of its policy. At the time of crisis in 1842 there was every reason to believe that the Ministerial party was the strongest in the House, and it certainly could only have been defeated by the alliance between the Conservatives led by Messrs. Lafontaine and Baldwin, such a coalition would have resembled very much that between Fox and Lord North, but neither Mr. Lafontaine nor Mr. Baldwin would have consented to take office with Sir Allen MacNab. The new coalition was one between men who held common views of public policy, and it was completely successful, having been approved by an all but unanimous vote in the House. It is a circumstance not worthy of notice that the Governor, who alone of all Lord Elgin's predecessors, is held in grateful remembrance by the French-Canadian population, was a Conservative in his politics. Lords Durham, Sydenham and Metcalfe, though, all but especially the two first-named, decidedly Liberal, will never be so considered by French-Canadians, while Sir Charles Bagot, I am inclined to think, stands at least as high as any other Governor in their estimation. Unfortunately that most upright and conscientious statesman was removed by death shortly after the reconstruction of the Administration, and was succeeded by Sir Charles, afterwards Lord Metcalfe.
