

Canadian International Development Co-operation (CIDC) - Ottawa

Canadian International Development Co-operation (CIDC) - Ottawa

Canadian International Development Co-operation (CIDC) - Ottawa

Division of International Development

The main function of the Department of External Affairs is to represent the Government of Canada in its relations with other countries and international organizations.

The Department of External Affairs is responsible for the formulation and implementation of Canada's foreign policy. It also coordinates the activities of the various Canadian agencies operating abroad.

The Department of External Affairs is also responsible for the promotion of international peace and security, and for the advancement of international law.

The Department of External Affairs is also responsible for the promotion of international trade and economic co-operation.

The Department of External Affairs is also responsible for the promotion of international cultural and educational co-operation.

The Department of External Affairs is also responsible for the promotion of international scientific and technical co-operation.

International Development Co-operation (IDC) - Ottawa

The International Development Co-operation (IDC) is a program of the Government of Canada that provides financial and technical assistance to developing countries.

The IDC is administered by the International Development Co-operation Board, which is composed of representatives from the various Canadian agencies involved in the program.

The IDC is also administered by the International Development Co-operation Secretariat, which is located in Ottawa.

The IDC is also administered by the International Development Co-operation Council, which is located in Ottawa.

The IDC is also administered by the International Development Co-operation Commission, which is located in Ottawa.

The IDC is also administered by the International Development Co-operation Committee, which is located in Ottawa.

The IDC is also administered by the International Development Co-operation Task Force, which is located in Ottawa.

The IDC is also administered by the International Development Co-operation Working Group, which is located in Ottawa.