ROXBURY

Roxbury's success has been due to the efficiency of its teaching method. There are no forms. After a careful physical and psychological test each boy is assigned to classes no larger than 5. The number of hours instruction in each course, the size and character of class entered, and the number of courses a boy may carry are determined by his ability and state of preparation.

Large faculty—one master for each five boys. One hundred and fifty acre campus and farm. Three dormitories. All athletic teams, gym work, boxing, wrestling, under expert coaches and instructors. Ten saddle horses for boys' use. A large open-air swimming pool to be constructed next spring.

Two months summer session for boys who need additional work, and boys preparing for September examinations.

Roxbury's record has been extraordinary. This summer only two out of over one hundred final candidates failed to enter college.

Students admitted any time during the year when there are vacancies.
