

as well as to the law under the Statute of Distribution. The law of Descent of Real Estate of Ontario, of British Columbia, the North West Territories and Keewatin is, upon the whole, more just than that of Quebec. A reference to the Table will, we think, satisfy most persons that it is possible to enact a Law of Descent, to Real and Personal Property, based upon both systems.

The author has met with more serious difficulties than he expected in making what he confesses can only be considered as a short summary of the Law of Intestacy in the Dominion. Even the Parliamentary Library at Ottawa does not contain a full series of the Reports of the Maritime Provinces.
