Last night at the St. Stephen's Club Bert Roadhouse, deputy minister of agriculture, had the honor of being the feature. "Rural Life and Its Problems" was his subject and he dealt with it in a way that interested his audience from the beginning. Mr. Roadhouse began with the clearing of the land by the pioneer settlers and he finished by describing the earnest endeavors of the department of agriculture to aid the Ontario farmer, to promote scientific agriculture, which makes the farms more productive and to improve rural conditions in many ways. Thruout Ontario, sold Mr. Roadhouse, the old prejudice against "book farming" is diminishing, because the department of agriculture and the Ontario Agricultural College have demonstrated to the farmers that scientific farming pays. One convincing instance the deputy minister told, an instance of the great value of the work in seed grain development accomplished by the experimental farm maintained by the Guelph Agricultural College. From some seed barley Professor Zavitz developed a superior strain of barley which gives a yield of over five bushels to an acre more than any other kind of barley known, and of which now over 500,000 acres are grown in Ontario alone, and which has increased the value of the bar-Popular Officers Remembered by Staff, Prisoners' Aid and Others.

known, and of which now over 500,000 acres are grown in Ontario alone, and which has increased the value of the barley crop in Ontario more than a millon dollars a year. This, Mr. Roadhouse said, was only an isolated instance of the enormous value to the farmers of the province of the work achieved by the agricultural college, which is now famous over the whole agricultural world for high standards and efficiency, and which attracts to itself 1000 students annually, many from remote parts of the world Yesterday, at noon, Fred W. Lyons severed his connection with the Cen-tral Prison, to become warden of the new prison farm, now being organized at Edmonton, Alberta. His experience as a disciplinarian is well known as a disciplinarian is well known among prison officials, and he had the distinction of being entrusted with the ous over the whole agricultural world for high standards and efficiency, and which attracts to itself 1000 students annually, many from remote parts of the world.

Personal Touch

Mr. Roadhouse spoke of the new practice of the department of agriculture, that of opening in the principal town of a county an office in which is installed a district representative of the department, to get in close personal touch with the farmers, and teach them batter methods, and improved ways of workings the land, making it, more productive, improving orchards and breeds of cattle, and in many other ways to benefit the farmers. There were now, he said, 31 offices in 31 different county towns and these district representatives had obtained splendid results. He knew one farmer who had told him personally that the information and teaching received from the district representative in his county had been worth to him since the office had been opened, $3000 in actual cash.

Mr. Roadhouse spoke of the continual efforts of the department which he had the honor to serve to uplift rural conditions and place farming on both a scientific and a business basis. The usefulness of the department was now being fully appreciated by the farmers.

Mr. Roadhouse's address was not only interesting and instructive, it was entertaining as well, and the speaker's description of pioneer life, the difficulties of clearing the land and the hardships and discomforts endured in the early days, when there was little except drudgery and monotony in farm work, was greatly enjoyed by his audience.
