ADDRESS BY CONSUL

J. Joyce-Broderick Spoke Before Members of Women's Canadian Club.

At the meeting of the Women's Canadian Club yesterday afternoon, the speaker of the day was Hon. J. Joyce Broderick, British consul, stationed for the past five years at New York. A large number of the membership of Toronto, which now has reached nine bundred and which the president Toronto, which now has reached nine hundred, and which the president, Mrs. George Dickson, hopes may reach the thousand mark before Christmas, were out to hear the address.

Women, said Mr. Broderick, in his opening remarks, are now asking for a share in the activities at present confined to the masculine part of humanity, and there is at least one subject upon which both may agree, that of peace—national, international that of peace—national, international and domestic. The tendency of the time is to emphasize this more and more, still the international horizon is even now darkened by clouds which if they broke out would affect every one of us. . . Wars in the past had their uses. They showed that patriot-ism burned as brightly in one country as in another. When man fought hand-to-hand there was something of a glamor about it. Now there was slaughter by machinery.

No Barriers.
Speaking of the department of the consulate, Mr. Broderick said that dur-ing his term in the United States it was his experience that there was little enquiry from the office on the part of Canadians. He wanted it made clear that there were no barriers to information going from the department and that all connected with it would gladly be of service to Cana-ada and Canadians.

From a comparison of figures regarding the trade of Canada, Mr. Broderick was of the opinion that Canada in a brief space of time would become mainly a manufacturing coun- The order has increased with such bounds try without however, losing its agri- that it is considered advisable to estab-

Stimulate Trade.

A consul cannot create trade, but he may suggest the manner in which it may be carried on. He is the amsador of trade and he is to see that its path is made as smooth as possible. Consuls can save merchants from irritating delays due to custom laws.

Comparing Canada with the United States, the speaker said that the progress of the former would be more accelerated in the twentieth century than even the wonderful progress of than even the wonderful progress of the United States in the nineteenth. The Helpful Stock Jar.

EW of us agree with the French chefs who insist that the stock pot shall be upon every range open to receive bits of meat and bones as they are trimmed from meats, its contents ready to be drawn upon for all sauces and soups. Old-fashioned folk used to divide the roots year after year, and plant these to form stiff, little borders to the flower beds. The low, violet-crowned clumps were well-fitted for perennial bordens, both on account of the flowers which appear early in spring, and from the fact that the
