Reindeer Meat

Government Railway To Alaska

Promises to Open New Distributing Centres

Herds Are Increasing—Animals Easy to Raise and the Flesh is Said to Be as Good as Beef or Mutton

Reindeer meat is finding its way into the market on the Pacific coast, and is certain to become an important part of the meat supply of this country when stable, was the sensation of the final day's meeting of the Grand Circuit at Charter Oak Park despite the fact that he lost the special pacing race with Russell Boy in two heats out of three. The speedy youngster, sired by Senator Hale, surprised the talent by capturing the second heat from Russell Boy and in doing so lowering his race record to 2:02.3-4, half a second faster than his previous best performance.

The other three races on the day's programme were over the half mile standing for five miles up to then was 1:23.4, established in 1902 by Zombira.

There were four other horses in the race. Dr. D. C. owned and driven by P. St. Vincent, of Montreal, finishing second by half a length, with Amazeur third and Junior Ward fourth.

The time for each mile was as follows: First mile, 2:32; second mile, 2:25; third mile, 2:28; fourth mile, 2:25; fifth mile, 2:29.

Time for five miles, 12:23.4.

the government railroad to Alaska provides the means of shipping to distributing centres in this country, according to Clio Manner, writing in The Catholic World.

There were 70,243 reindeer in Alaska, according to the government report on the subject in 1915, nearly all descendants of herds totalling 1,200 which were imported from Russia to stock the country between 1902 and 1906, and the herds today are increasing at a remarkable rate. Until 1914, the raising of reindeer was confined to natives and Eskimos, but since then the government has permitted others to enter the business. Beginning in the fall of 1914, shipments of reindeer meat to Seattle and other Pacific coast cities have been allowed. Mr. Manner says that reindeer steak is as palatable as beefsteak, and that it has been well liked at many of the best hotels in California, Washington and Oregon for from one of the seal, the Indians and the Eskimos were reduced to a state of starvation. With the coming of the white man and the wild game and while upon which the natives had relied for their food supply had been driven into the inaccessible north lands, and now the seal, the one animal which remained for them to live upon, was taken from them. Scores of these people were wiped out of existence by disease and hunger before the government awoke to the fact that it was its duty to preserve the lives of these unfortunate wretches. It was Captain M. A. Healey of the United States revenue cutter Bear who was responsible for the suggestion which finally led to the introduction of the reindeer from Alaska.

Twelve hundred reindeer were brought over from Russia between 1902 and 1906, but in the latter year Russia forbade further exportations of the animal. The herds already imported were placed under the care of Laplanders brought over for the express purpose of teaching how to breed and care for the animals. Eskimo and Indian boys are now taught how to raise reindeer at government experimental stations in Alaska. They are trained in this industry and taught reading, writing, arithmetic, and sanitation for five years at government expense, after which they receive from six to ten reindeer with which to start a herd of their own. Many of these boys have become wealthy.

Nearly every portion of reindeer's flesh can be used, and one cut is practically as good as another, says Mr. Manner. "It would seem as if this industry ought to appeal strongly to those of our young agricultural students who are particularly interested in stock raising, for it undoubtedly has an element of adventure about it which they, more than any other class of farmers, would appreciate. Reindeer can be raised for the market much more cheaply than cattle, for they find their own feed both in winter and summer and they can live in barren wastes which would support no other kind of animal. It has been estimated that there is in Alaska close to 300,000 square miles of this land which would afford pasturage for millions of deer. These demonstrated descendants of the caribou which still roam wild in certain parts of Alaska and British Columbia, besides being easy to feed, are not difficult to raise, as they are exceptionally healthy and suffer from no disease."

OVERCOMING THE SHIP SCARCITY

Shortage of bottoms has been felt on the Pacific coast, as elsewhere, but lack of ships, in one instance at least, has been overcome by Yankee ingenuity in a novel manner.

The government's orders for lumber for news ships, many cantonments, etc., overtaxed carrying capacity of Pacific coastwise lines, and to get the logs from Oregon and Washington forests to the mills, the logs are chained together in huge rafts, 800 feet in length and 40 to 60 in width. The completed raft is oval in shape and has appearance of an immense turtle. It is picked up by a seagoing tug and towed to its destination, safe against U-boat attacks and at a very reasonable rate for freight.
