FRANCE CAN MAKE SHELLS SHE NEEDS

Yves Guyot Tells How Nation Organized For Big Output

CAN NOW HOLD HER OWN

Requires U. S. Steel For Munitions, But Is Otherwise Ready to Fight Till Victory Comes

London, July 8.—"France can hold her own against Germany. She herself makes all the shells that play such havoc in the enemy's ranks, and she will keep on making all she needs."

In this confident tone spoke Yves Guyot, the French economist and former minister of public works in conversation with a newspaper correspondent at a London hotel, where he had been staying a few days while engaged here on Red Cross work.

M. Guyot is sanguine that the French forces will show ever greater aggressiveness in the next few months than they have yet done. He is sure that Joffre is able to beat back any fresh German attempt to take Paris and eventually to drive the Germans from France and the region of Alsace Lorraine as the price of war.

"The munitions problem in France is not so acute as in England," said M. Guyot. "In France as soon as the war started we began turning out the shells as fast as our factories could make them. In a short time, they were going full blast. We have been able to supply our army with ample ammunition and to have shells enough to shake up the enemy whenever we put on spurts."

"It is vitally important that England has come to the realization of the need of equipping her own army with adequate ammunition. Up to now, the English army has been sadly handicapped, but with the energetic Lloyd George in command the munitions output in the near future is certain to bring a sudden change in the status of England in the war."

"We in France being in such immediate contact with the horrors of war had a stern sense of the necessity of fully equipping our army forced upon us at the very beginning of the conflict. The only thing we have lacked has been steel, and we have been getting some of that from our old friends, the United States. France has steel plants, and they do a tremendous amount of work, but altogether they do not turn out enough for our munitions needs. So we had to turn elsewhere for some of this product, and it was America that came to our aid."

"We have got the steel with which to make shells. Our munitions are well organized and the whole spirit prevailing among them is to help France to win the bloodiest war of the century. Everywhere in France the feeling is that the war must go on to the desperate end and that the Allies must win the victory."

"The French soldiers have shown characteristic spirit, courage and daring throughout the war. Under skilled leadership they have fought valiantly, losing but one man to the Germans' ten."

"That is the strategy of the French warfare. Our field leaders do not believe in the needless sacrifice of men."

"At Dinant and Souillon the German dead were piled up like high walls, so that when our men rushed on they had extreme difficulty in making way because of the blockade of human bodies. That is the way the German officers throw away the lives of their men. It is a wicked, wanton, brutal waste of human life."

"The French army has the greatest confidence also in its 75 millimeter gun, the greatest ever built, and built entirely by France. In battle these guns work havoc in the German lines."

"The Germans have always boasted that they are the best fighters in Europe and that their guns and shells are the most deadly. In neither respect is this star has Germany shown herself superior. In the engagements with the French since the time when France caught its breath, France has shown that with all of Germany's many years of preparation for war the German army is actually the inferior of the French, and the near future will show more than ever the hollowness of Germany's boast."

When asked how long he thought the war would last, M. Guyot shrugged his shoulders.

"Nobody can foresee the duration of war," he replied, "but the outcome is not in doubt. Germany may get ahead in some parts of the fighting lines for the moment and the outlook may seem dark, but eventually the enemy will be quashed. The war will go until that day."

FAIRVILLE'S COSY PICTURE HOUSE

SCREENS "THE LURE OF THE MASK"

"The Lure of the Mask" is a Mutual Master Picture that sets a new high standard in motion picture achievement—a screen portrayal of one of the most successful novels ever published, written by Harold McGrath. It is fitting that such a noted subject be interpreted by an all star cast. Harold Lockwood, whose name is a powerful factor in filmdom, plays the lead. Opposite him is Elsie Lane Wilson, whose success in "Every Woman" has brought her world wide fame. Irving Cummings, Lucy Payton, Hal Clements and a host of others complete the cast. The story has an intense plot, its beautiful scenic effects, and its elaborate theme just holds you until the last flicker is projected on the screen. The program is chock full of comedy. A "Colored Girl's Romance."

TIME FIGHTS FOR ALLIES, HE SAYS

This is View of Noted Scientist, Sir Wm. Crooks

London, July 6.—The Daily Chronicle prints an interview with Sir William Crooks, by Harold Begbie, wherein the eminent scientist gave his views on the war. He said:

"I think we started badly; we were certainly not so well prepared as Germany. I do not know that anybody can rightly be blamed for that state of affairs. We have done very well considering, and I am inclined to say that as regards that part of the work in which I have been able to render the authorities some help, this country will very soon be on an equality with our foes. There is no need for anxiety, certainly no need for panic."

"It looks as if it will be a long war, but the longer it lasts the stronger will be the power of the Allies. We must simply set ourselves to wear out the Germans. To do that we have only to press steadily and quietly forward on our road. We have not got to take cities and execute wonderful marches. All we need to do is to wear out the enemy. We must stay longer, we must wear him out, we must wear him out. After that we can enter his country and do what we like with it."

"A great thing for men to convince themselves of is that this war will be won not by fury of attack and not by guilting, but simply by hanging on. He who hangs on longest will win, and a man need not think very profoundly to assure himself that whereas we can hang on almost indefinitely the Germans cannot. Every day might be called a victory for the Allies. Time fights for us."

Asked his opinion on the employment of asphyxiating gas, Sir William said:—"On the whole I am against its use by the Allies. The Germans have gone to the devil to help them. I don't like to think that we, with our just cause, should go to the same source for assistance. I take it the German Empire will fall into its original parts. It will be left with no power of attack; it will never again be the organized machine it was."

"We must destroy the Germans. There can be no other end for civilized mankind. I take it the German Empire will fall into its original parts. It will be left with no power of attack; it will never again be the organized machine it was."

MUCH CONTRABAND GOING TO EUROPE

Twenty-one Vessels Loaded at New York—Chiefly General Lines

New York, July 7.—Shipments of contraband for Europe from the port of New York are increasing. Orders placed in the United States months ago are now being completed and rushed to this port to be loaded. Twenty-one vessels were loading at New York for six countries of Europe during the week ended July 4.

A comparison of the figures shows that the shipment of food supplies is small in comparison with the whole, and also that the amount of actual munitions being loaded is not large. The great bulk of the 100,000 tons loaded in the week were raw materials and general supplies, which might or might not be used for the armies of the nations at war.

France is getting most of the supplies. The only ship loaded with high explosives during the week was the Wesley.

Customs officials carefully watch and check off the cargo loaded on each outbound vessel, making special note of contraband and munitions. Passenger vessels are not allowed to carry explosives, the single exception being small arms and loaded cartridges which are not considered under the head of munitions for purposes of shipment. Munitions may be carried on passenger vessels, but not loaded on board.

High explosives, dynamite, gun cotton, etc., are loaded from lighters in Gravesend Bay, and the vessels are required to display a danger flag during the process.

Exclusive of the Wesley, 88 other ships were loaded during the week. Russia will get 117, England 99, France 80, and Greece 46. Two vessels for London carried 179 cases of automobile parts and one for Russia was loaded with 40 cases of cars. There were 1,871 coils of automobile tires loaded for England.

England will get all of the fifty aeroplanes that were loaded during the week. Most of them were packed in huge cases and lashed to the decks of the White Star Line's Adriatic, which carried 1,549 cases of empty projectiles.
