THE CARE OF MARKET EGGS

By direction of Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, a timely bulletin on the care of market eggs has been issued from Ottawa. It directs particular attention to the nature of the enormous losses that result from inadequate and unsatisfactory methods in the handling of market eggs, and suggests means by which permanent and needed improvement may be brought about in the Canadian egg trade, to the corresponding advantage of both producer and consumer.

The bulletin which is No. 16 of the live stock branch constitutes a pamphlet of twenty-four pages in which are shown a number of clear photo engravings which are very helpful to a clear understanding of the text. Copies may be had free by applying to the publications branch of the department of agriculture, Ottawa.

After describing the usual method of handling eggs and the results of lack of care of various kinds, the bulletin offers specific suggestions to the farmer, the merchant, the egg buyer, the railway and express companies, the dealers and packers, the retailer and the consumer. The farmer is enjoined among other things to remove the male bird immediately after the breeding season and market no fertile eggs; to provide roomy nests and plenty of clean nesting material; to collect the eggs regularly at least once, better twice, a day in moderate weather and more frequently in very warm and very cold weather and to remove them at once to clean utensils to a cool dry cellar; to cover with a clean cloth to prevent dust from settling upon them and also to prevent evaporation and fading; to market them in suitable cases as frequently and as directly as possible. The suggestions offered to merchants, buyers, transportation companies and others are equally specific and practical.

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Wood's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a constant backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and an enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

The Crimson team scored two touchdowns, and Halfback Brickley kicked two field goals. It was the first time in eleven years that Harvard had crossed the Yale goal line. Yale was completely outclassed in all departments of the game. The upper picture shows Brickley of Harvard trying to go through centre, the lower one Flynn of Yale punting. George W. Fowler's Catechising
Brings a Prompt Statement of Liberal Leaders' Stand for Reciprocity—Hon. Mr. Pugsley on the Navy Matter

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Repeating the indication of Hon. Mr. White, minister of finance, that there was a difference of opinion among the members of the Liberal party, George W. Fowler, who followed the declaration of Hon. Mr. Pugsley in the debate, declared:

"And dare the ex-minister from St. John tell us if he is still in favor of reciprocity?"

"Assuredly," responded Mr. Pugsley, rising. "I answer emphatically, yes." (Liberal cheers.)

"Well," proceeded Mr. Fowler, "but what about his leader, the right honorable gentleman who leads the party. Will he answer for himself as to his policy?"

Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose at once. "With pleasure," he replied, amid prolonged Liberal cheering. "We are a united party on this side of the house in everything."

"Oh, yes, I know," put in Mr. Fowler, "but what I want to ask the right honorable gentleman is this: Has he changed his policy in regard to reciprocity?"

Sir Wilfrid again arose. "I am aware that there are some Liberals who have changed their policy. I am not one of them. I stick to my black."

The chief's declaration was greeted by ringing Liberal cheering.

"Then what about the member for South Wellington?" persisted Mr. Fowler. "Where does he stand? He is not in favor of reciprocity."

"It was Mr. Guthrie's turn to rise. "I was, and I am still," he declared, while the Liberal cheering broke out afresh.

"Then you have changed your mind since you told this house that reciprocity was dead," was Mr. Fowler's rejoinder. "Not at all," was Mr. Guthrie's response. "I said that reciprocity was dead at that time. It was dead then, for the time being. Its principles live."

It was not until the Liberals ceased applauding that Mr. Fowler was able to continue his speech. He promptly dropped his catechising.

An illuminative little curtain raiser to the real opening of the naval debate next week in the commons was given in the house tonight by Hon. Mr. Pugsley. The ex-minister of public works, during the course of his speech, on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, took occasion to succinctly restate the Liberal policy on the naval issue, to reassert the principle and wisdom of a Canadian-built and manned navy, and to point out the real emergency which now actuates the government's course in the matter.

"I do not think the government has acted properly in so long keeping parliament and the country in the dark in a matter of such great importance as the naval policy," said Dr. Pugsley.

"Even in the Hochelaga campaign, where I am glad to say the secretary of state succeeded in defeating his Nationalist opponent by an overwhelming majority, Hon. Mr. Coté was not allowed to tell the electors what the naval policy was. All he could say was that he knew nothing about it."

A Canadian-Built Navy, the Best Aid.

Dr. Pugsley said he and a great many people were not satisfied with the forecasts of the government naval policy. "Canada should put herself in a position to do her duty to the empire with her own ships and her own men and not hire other people to do the work for her. The Laurier government had faith enough in Canada to believe that a navy could be built in Canada. The late government had called for tenders for warships and had found great British builders willing to come to Canada, establish shipbuilding yards, organize great forces of skilled workers and build warships for the Canadian navy."

"Several British firms tendered," said Dr. Pugsley, "and among them, the great firm of Cammell, Laird & Co., which have a mile of shipyards on the Mersey, where great warships are turned out for the British navy, were the lowest-tenders. They offered to build in Canada and were prepared to establish their shipyards at St. John, beside the dock which is being built by the Norton Griffiths Co."

"The Liberal government were defeated on the eve of accepting the tender of Cammell, Laird & Co." When the Conservative government was formed, Hon. Mr. Hazen, as minister of marine, concluded the arrangements, returned the cash deposit of Cammell, Laird & Co., and by doing so he struck a blow at St. John and at Canada which may never be repaired."

For Nationalist Alliance.

Dr. Pugsley believed the Conservative party and even the Conservative government really favored the establishment of a Canadian navy.

"I believe," he said, "they would do so, but for the pledge given to their Nationalist allies in Quebec. I hope the Conservative government will find strength to break away entirely from their Nationalist allies and cancel the pledge given them that Canada shall not embark upon a permanent naval policy until after a plebiscite has been taken."

The foreshadowed emergency contribution of cash was too much like buying defence. It would not go down with the people of Canada. The proper policy and the honorable and manly course would be to establish a Canadian navy and year by year develop it into an arm which would be a permanent source of strength to the empire in time of danger. But the government was pledged to the Nationalists and the only thing left for them to fall back on was an emergency contribution.

"The premier and his colleagues went to England this summer 'looking for an emergency' and one of their supporters, the member for Brandon (J. A. M. Aitken) not satisfied with this, went to Germany looking for an emergency. He must have succeeded beyond his hopes, for he came back and announced that Germany and England were actually at war."

Discredits Reports

Regina, Sask., Nov. 28.—Word from A. Allan, overseer of the village of Kelliker, Sask., absolutely discredits sensational reports circulated as to the condition of affairs there. He says that while an assault was committed on ex-Editor Biddell of the Echo there was absolutely no truth in the reports that armed factions paraded the village and that a siege exists. The police likewise deny reported appeals for aid from the authorities of Kelliker. They only information relating to court proceedings arises out of the Biddell assault case.

WILSON'S INVALIDS' PORT

"The temperate use of wine promotes digestion."
Dr. JONATHAN PEREIRA.

IT TAKES much more besides.
IT TAKES infinite patience for the examination and selection of the choicest Cima de Douro grapes at vintage time.
IT TAKES expert knowledge and chemical skill of a high order for the conversion of the rich juice yielded by these picked grapes into Port Wine of a quality to suit the critical taste of the testing connoisseur.
IT TAKES the experience of a vintner whose lifetime has been spent in this work to know when the Wine has attained its perfection of rich, delicate flavor and aroma and delightfully clear, ruby color.
IT TAKES fine discrimination and exquisite skill in the intricate art of blending to combine that powerful tonic and febrifuge—Cinchona Bark—with the perfect Wine, so that the pungent tonic taste is effectually covered.
IT TAKES finally, the master mind that guides all these processes—the proprietor himself—to personally judge of quality, purity and excellence before the tonic is placed upon the market.

Thus, you are assured that every bottle of Wilson's Invalids' Port Wine you open is of the same uniform high quality and excellence, and that you are getting a wine that is not only rigidly prepared to a professional prescription, but one that is held in high esteem by the Profession as a reliable, rational tonic and febrifuge in specified cases. QUEBEC MARRIAGE DECISION

Montreal, Nov. 29.—Disagreeing with the conclusions reached by Justices Charbonneau and Archibald in two other famous cases, Justices Delorme and Teller yesterday handed down a ruling in a marriage annulment case to the effect that the canonical impediment of consanguinity, unless a dispensation is received from competent authority, constitutes a cause of nullity of marriage, even before the civil law.

Justice Archibald, the third member of the court, however, handed down a dissenting judgment in the course of which he maintained, in the main, the conclusions found in former rulings by himself as well as by Judge Charbonneau.

The case at issue before the court for review was that of Napoleon Tremblay, a farmer of St. Victoire, Richelieu county, who sought the annulment of his marriage to Dame Marvina Despatie. There ceremony attacked was performed at St. Victoire, Oct. 25, 1904, before Rev. Father J. Boudrey, it being subsequently shown that the contracting parties were related as cousins from the fourth to the fourth degree.

British manufacturers supply 90 per cent of the material used in the manufacture of the Blue Amberol records.
