AGENT FITZSTUBBS. Investigation of the Charges by the Hon. Pustice Crease.

The investigation of the charges pre ferred against Captain Fitzstubbs by John Sanderson was held by Mr. Justice Crease this afternoon in the court house at Nelson. Neither Captain Fitzstubbs nor Mr. Sanderson were allowed the assistance of counsel. John Sanderson testified that he was employed as foreman on the Nakusp & Slocan trail in July, 1892, and that when the payroll for the month of August, 1892, was made up, he, at the request of Mr. Fitzstubbs, added the name of William Smith to the payroll, and that Fitzstubbs drew a check for the amount and placed it in his pocket. The reason that Fitzstubbs gave for doing so was that the government did not allow him anything for his travelling expenses and he had to do these things to keep even. On crossexamination Sanderson denied that he signed Smith's name to the voucher; that he merely certified to the correctness of the payroll. He admitted that he knew it was not right; but did not know at the time that the government paid the only learned differently when he saw the published statement that the officials had been paid large sums for travelling ex-

As regards the Lardo trail part of the nvestigation, Sanderson testified positively that he had given no instructions as to the amount to be expended, and that when he met Fitzstubbs at the latter's office Fitzstubbs objected to the amount that had been expended, but only because it prevented him (Sanderson) from putting names on the payroll, so that Fitzstubbs could reimburse himself for the three or four hundred dollars he had spent when at Victoria the winter before. That it could not have been done of condolence to the Countess of Paris. now on account of Goepel having made It is said that a wreath will be deposited the time out, and if he knew it he would be trying the same game, as he is one of them smart rascals. Sanderson was asked by Mr. Justice

Crease, if he did not know that specific sums were appropriated for certain works, like that of the Lardo trail, and Sanderson answered that he did not, and. said further, that Mr. Fitzstubbs had never instructed him as to the amount set apart for that particular work. Captain Fitzstubbs testified that he employed Sanderson as foreman on the Nakusp & Slocan trail; that he told Sanderson to add the name of William Smith to the payroll; that he issued a check for the amount; that he used the amount of the check to reimburse himself for amounts that he had paid out of his own pocket for work done on the government reserve at Nelson.

Question by Mr. Justice Crease: "How did you come to insert William smit's name on your payroll?" Mr. Fitzstubbs paying the men I told Sanderson that I ment reserve, and that I had already spent over $90 on it; give me some time myself for what I have paid out. He (Sanderson) said, How much do you want? I said, 'Forty or fifty dollars from this trail, as it is not costing a great deal.' I said, 'Put another name on.' Then he (Sanderson) asked what name. I said, 'Any name-William Smith.' Then he (Sanderson) said again, 'How much do you want? You had bettertake enough while you are about it.' I looked at the payroll and saw that $75 was the highest on the payroll, and it could not be for any more than that. He signed William Smith's name, and I. drew the check for $75."

Question by Mr. Justice Crease: "Then that was for work done for government account for which there was no appro-

Question by Mr. Justice Crease: "Why sent it down to the government, saying that you had been obliged to exceed the appropriation and asking that it be Nelson a large sum, and I did not think they would allow it.'

Fitzstubbs put in a general denial to all of Sanderson's versions of the conversations that had taken place between them regarding adding names to payrolls
