SICK IN BED; HOUSE ON FIRE

Mrs. Doucet Was Rescued
Just in Time

Was Alone in House and Helpless, When
Exploding Lamp Set Bed on Fire

The chief of police intends to take all precautions possible to prevent a repetition of the robberies and petty thieving which followed in the wake of the circus at Portland and other places. The whole police force will be on duty today, night and day men alike, and they will be so generally distributed over the city as to prevent any serious trouble.

The chief will also supply five or six policemen at the request of the circus management to aid in keeping order about the grounds. Special call men also will be at hand at the police stations. The circus people also have a number of Pinkerton men with them to prevent, as far as possible, the operations of pickpockets. Ladies who are in the habit of wearing watches on the outside of their dresses had better leave them home today, even if they look less opulent. It would also be advisable for people to leave their pockets clear of valuables and not carry with them a great deal more money than they are likely to need.

The falling lamp set fire to a rug on the floor and the blaze quickly spread to the bed on which Mrs. Doucet, who was too ill to move, was lying. There was no one else in the house, but some of the neighboring women, hearing the cries, rushed in, and, seeing the fire, they quickly removed to a nearby house and an attempt was made to extinguish the fire. No water could be obtained at the tap, so while someone ran to ring in an alarm, water was carried from other houses. The fire, however, had gained too great a headway to yield to these measures.

The chemical engine arrived promptly, and, with a few minutes' work, put an end to the conflagration. The damage done to the house was considerable. Some persons under the stress of excitement rang in a second alarm, and in consequence a large crowd of spectators quickly assembled to see the fire. Their relief at finding there was no great fire seemed to be somewhat tempered by disappointment at missing the spectacle of a big blaze.

REWARD OFFERED TO APPREHEND MURDERER

Selectmen of Massachusetts Town Want to Capture Boy's Destroyer

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., July 19.—The selectmen of the town today offered a reward of $250 for information leading to the arrest of the murderer of John Streub, the 12 year old boy whose body was found last Sunday in the woods near Housatonic. This action was contemplated several days ago, but was postponed at that time, as the selectmen had reason to think that an arrest would be made very shortly without the incentive of a reward. The developments of the official investigation of the last few days, however, have been of little value, so the decision to announce the reward was reached today.

It is believed that the murder was committed on the morning of Tuesday, July 10. According to relatives of young Streub, he was absent from his home on the Monday night preceding, and the efforts of the detectives today have been directed in part to finding out where the boy spent that night. This part of the investigation is conducted on the theory that the boy was killed by tramps, but the officers do not deny that they are conducting other lines of inquiry pointing in quite another direction.

It was said tonight that there is little likelihood that any arrest will be made until after the inquest is held, and the date of the inquest has not yet been set.

"VERY FEW ESCAPE US"

Alert Work of Police Caused Arrest of Deserting Russian Sailor

Quick work on the part of the police force resulted in the capture of a deserter from the Russian bark Matas last night within an hour of the issuing of instructions for his arrest.

At roll call yesterday morning Chief Clark read the description of Cyril Jive, an eighteen year old sailor, who had been reported by the master for deserting from the Matas, which is lying at Walker's wharf.

Early in the evening Officers McCollom and Ward reported to Sergt. Baxter that a man answering the description was in a bar on Mill street. While watching for this suspect the sergeant noticed a man coming up Smythe street, who resembled more closely the man wanted.

He was arrested and taken to the vessel for identification. The skipper promptly declared him to be the right man, and he was forthwith escorted to the police station.

He will answer to the charge of desertion in court tomorrow morning.

Jimmy Walker, of 2 City Road, whose disappearance was mentioned in this paper on Wednesday last, is still absent and his family do not know positively where he is, but they have reason to believe that the boy has been spending intervening time since leaving home at Woodstock, and that he came down yesterday and went out to Moosepath.

DON'T WEAR YOUR WATCHES OUTSIDE

Extra Precautions will be Taken by the Police But They Cannot Watch Everyone

The chief of police intends to take all precautions possible to prevent a repetition of the robberies and petty thieving which followed in the wake of the circus at Portland and other places. The whole police force will be on duty today, night and day men alike, and they will be so generally distributed over the city as to prevent any serious trouble.

UNDERWEAR FOR TINY TODDLERS

4735—The fashionable woman is by no means a blind follower of fashion, but utilizes such good taste and discretion in the clothing of herself and her children as to combine style and practicality in everything. The little maid, between the ages of two and six, is continually on the move and needs to do in a day than older heads could think of in a week. With the present vogue of very short dresses the gathering of drawers tight at the knee is an excellent mode and one widely adopted by up-to-date mothers. This small drawer also pulls up with a string at the waist so that the little maid can not outgrow these garments before they wear out. A narrow embroidery may edge the drawers a ruffle of little value, but the decision to announce the reward was reached today.

NATIONAL SPINNERS' UNION SUPPORT LOCAL OPERATIVES

BOSTON, July 19.—A meeting of the Executive Council of the National Spinners Union, was held in Boston today to discuss the matter of taking action to aid the operatives in those cotton manufacturing districts of New England where wages have not been advanced. All the 15 members of the council were present.

The first business was a passage of a resolution endorsing the action of any district in endeavoring to secure an advance in wages. It was reported that wages had been advanced in nearly all the cotton manufacturing districts of New England where wages have not been advanced. The Lowell wage schedule was discussed and it was voted to endorse the action of the Lowell spinners and to give them every possible support at the command of the National Union.
