EUNICE: A RUSTIC IDYL.

Eunice's delight when she was invited must be left to the imagination. Think of your brightest dream made actual, and then you will understand a little of the girl's emotion as she packed her small wardrobe into the old skin-covered trush that had once held a portion of her mother's trousseau. There was no self-conociones about Eunice; she never thought how her shabby clothing would strike Mrs. Gregg, or what impression she would make at Tregby.

It was July weather, and the earth was pompously attired, the fields an emeral, the she would wash of healthland breaking here and there into a blaze of golden gorse. The girl scarcely seemed to breathe asshe was swept through miles and miles of rural panorama. And then the wonders of the little town when she reached it; the station, that seemed to breathe asshe was swept through miles and miles of rural panorama. And then the wonders of the little town when she reached it; the station, that seemed to her so busy and so bustling; the noise of vehicles; the crowd of foot-passengers; and the magnificence of Tregby, and her husband's position and care and parted lips, that now and then gave little gasps of astonishment.

Never had Mrs. Gregg been so successful with a guest; never had she been offered so full a cup of honest admiration. She discoursed of the magnificence of Tregby, and her husband's position and aimportance there, all the evening; he moise of vehicles; the crowd of foot-passengers; and the magnificence of Tregby, and her husband's position and aimportance there, all the evening is the moise of vehicles; the crowd of foot-passengers; and the magnificence of Tregby, and her husband's position and aimportance there, all the evening is the moise of vehicles; the crowd of foot-passengers; and the magnificence of Tregby, and her husband's position and aimportance there, all the evening is the moise of vehicles; the crowd of foot-passengers; and the magnificence of Tregby, and her husband's position and aimportance there, all the evening is the moise of vehicles; a Dark-Lantern To Investigate our Business.

Everything is as plain as day. It's just a simple wash, dry and iron in the simplest of ways. They're easy ways, too-easy for you if we do it for you. What seems almost impossible to you is clear sailing to us. We wash the most difficult jobs and make them look like new. We've often been asked how we wash so cheap; we cannot answer better than by saying that our business now is so large that we can afford to do it for the price we ask.

You might enquire into the way if you're not in it now. Perhaps you don't know it, but we mend the clothes we wash. Would'nt some of your young men friends like to know this. When there's a button off we sew it on, or a hole in the stocking, we darn it. We'll do it for you if you wish it.
