Mr. Maxwell Exposes Misrepresentations by Critics of Government

Member for St. John Continues Debate on Budget Speech.

How the Former Government Mismanaged Everything They Undertook.

In continuing the debate on the budget speech in the local legislature on Friday, Hon. Robert Maxwell said:

Regarding agricultural matters the criticisms of the hon. gentleman from Northumberland county were also far from the truth. This government was giving more attention to agriculture, and under the administration of his esteemed and Hon. friend, Hon. D. V. Landry, the agricultural department was doing more to assist this industry than had ever been accomplished before. New life had been brought into the department and it had been revived. The farmers of this province knew that in the Commissioner of Agriculture they had a friend who was having new markets opened up for them and doing everything that could be done to encourage agriculture and assist the industry. As an evidence of the government's sincerity in its endeavor to assist in developing the agricultural industries of the province it was only necessary to compare the expenditures in this department under the old government and under the new.

Take for instance, the agricultural expenditures in 1906 and 1907. For all branches of agriculture including exhibitions it was $61,847.91, while in 1909 and 1910 the expenditure was $92,051.94 or an increase of over $30,000, practically 50 per cent., and this year the estimates included $57,898.33 for agriculture.

Couldn't Even Buy a Horse.

The reason for the criticism of this government from the Hon. gentleman opposite was that it had not sent the Commissioner of Agriculture with a member of the legislature on a costly trip to England to buy horses and then have them engage a man over there at a further expense to buy the horses for them. That was the way the government which they supported so warmly handled things.

His Hon. friend (Mr. Robinson) had pointed out that he was able to discount a note in Montreal at 5 per cent., and criticized the government because they had succeeded in negotiating a loan for less than 4 per cent. It had cost the province $500 to negotiate the loan made by his Hon. friend. Contrast this with the way the Hon. Provincial Secretary had negotiated his loan. He had done it without one cent of cost to the province, outside of his necessary travelling expenses.

His Hon. friend should have been frank with the House and told all the circumstances attending that loan made by the late government.

His Hon. friend for Victoria had undertaken a criticism of the Hon. Provincial Secretary's budget, but he soon got away from the budget and by many misinterpretations and false statements, had attempted to misrepresent the government in the eyes of the people. That gentleman had read from the synoptic reports to support his statements and when he (Maxwell) had tried to explain he was interrupted by the Hon. gentlemen opposite.

The Succession Duties.

With regard to the succession duties, he knew he had protested while in opposition against the lowering of the amount on which succession duties were collected, but the gentleman from Victoria said he had then in the interest of the widows and orphans, condemned the collection of these duties. That was wholly untrue. What he had done when in opposition was to oppose the scheme of the old government to reduce the amount on which they were collected from $50,000 to $25,000. The opposition at that time had succeeded in defeating a bill to that effect, and that had been the first time on record where an opposition had succeeded in preventing the passage of a government measure.

A Servile Supporter.

His friend from Victoria had supported the last government in all its nefarious works. No more servile supporter than he ever sat on the government benches. His honorable friend was willing to support the old administration in its proposed reduction of the amount subject to succession duties, and this was only another instance of his subservience.

The honorable gentleman also claimed that he (Maxwell), when in opposition, had said that if they ever came to power they would pay bonded indebtedness out of the ordinary revenue. That was absolutely false.

On every platform in this country the members of this government had said they would never bond expenditures which should be paid out of ordinary revenue like the old government had done.

The Public Domain.

He also undertook to lecture the government as to what they should do with regard to the Public Domain Act. This government would do all in its power to preserve the public domain. When the government had increased the revenue from stumpage, the honorable gentleman had said the government was depleting the crown lands, and because they reduced the size of the logs they were depleting the forests of the province. But during all the years the old administration was in power, it had allowed much smaller timber to be cut than was now permitted. He did not think the reduction had wrought one particle of harm to the forest. It was better to have the size of log 16.9 and adhere to that regulation than have it 18.10 and allow logs of any size to be cut. The government would do all it could to preserve the public domain.

His hon. friend from Victoria had criticized his colleague from St. John (Mr. Hatheway). When his colleague had addressed the House he told of how the public franchises had been given away for nothing by the old government. In fact the whole northern section of the province had been given away and most of two other counties. If any company could show how they could develop the resources of the province this government would do all it could to assist the work.

Franchises Then and Now.

What about the Drummond Mines Company? That company had largely developed the northern part of the province and built up great shipping facilities at Newcastle. The government had fixed the royalty at five cents per ton for every ton taken from the mines operated by the Drummond Company, and made arrangements whereby the company must pay the government five cents per ton on one thousand tons per day whether they mined it or not so that the province was always sure of an income from this source.

But look at the action of the old government with regard to giving a valuable franchise in Westmorland county which was annually producing little or nothing.

The old government had known of the iron ore areas in Gloucester county and had spent $7,000 in developing them. The company they were dealing with turned around and sold the mines for $80,000 and the province never got a cent for the money expended in developing them.

His friend had not dared to criticize his colleague's remarks on labor matters. The opposition posed as friends of the common people as they had styled them, but the government know no such thing as the common people unless they were the red-blooded tillers of the soil.

Fishing Leases.

His friend from Victoria had told fishing leases were granted to foreigners as a result of which a native was sent to jail for catching a few salmon, but he (Tweeddale) forgot to say that these leases were made by the old government and would run out in a year or two.

His hon. friend from Westmorland criticized the government for the large expenditure in connection with the New Brunswick Coal and Railway. He said the railway had cost $16,200 over and above the income for running expenses this year, but he knew very well that the road was a legacy of the old government and must be run at a loss if run at all. He knew that when the old government had control of it, bonds were sold and the money put into running expenses. His criticism was therefore extremely unfair, since the road must be kept up for the benefit of the people in Kings and Queens counties.

The McAvity System.

With regard to the commission appointed to investigate the affairs of the railway, he would refer the House to the report of the three hon. commissioners, among them a judge of the supreme court. That report told how badly the books of the road had been kept and condemned the whole business.

The report of the commissioners at page 13 showed that George McAvity when a commissioner of the road, had kept no books whatever of the road's expenditure. If no results were evident from the investigation, it was because those who ran could read when called to the stand, were affected with bad memories and would give no information at all concerning it.

Where Copp Dipped In.

His hon. friend, Mr. Copp had dipped into the finances of the road as shown at page 28 of the report, to the extent of $1,025, for doing no work whatever. On page 24 George McAvity is shown to have received thousands of dollars not appearing in the report of the road published by the old administration. The cost of running the road under the old government had been far greater than under the economical and businesslike system adopted by the present government.

Mr. Maxwell then moved the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Pinder introduced the petition of John A. Miller, president of the Maritime Conference, Seventh Day Adventists, in favor of a bill relating to that denomination.

Mr. Munro presented the report of the municipalities committee.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

COST $1,150,000 BEFORE A VOLUME WAS PRINTED

Advent of New Britannica Encyclopaedia an Outstanding Event in the World of Letters--A Revolution in Paper --Toronto Professors Contributing Editors.

The announcement of the publication of a new and the eleventh edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica marks an event in the world of letters worth more than a passing notice. It is twenty-eight years since there has been an entirely new edition of the Encyclopaedia. The so-called tenth edition, published by The Times some nine years ago, consisted in reality of a supplement to the ninth edition, which was begun in 1875 and completed in 1889. The first edition dates back to 1768, and consisted of only three volumes, but so important was the service rendered by this and succeeding editions, and so well was the work done, that it is doubtful if there is any other publication in the world which enjoys so high a reputation. In this connection it is interesting to note that of the more notable encyclopaedias published in various countries since the first issue of the Britannica some never attained to a second edition, and only one can claim a continued existence of more than fifty years.

The eleventh edition is a completely new work founded upon a fresh survey of the world in every department of knowledge. Edward Gibbon, author of what Time has declared to be the greatest historical work the world has seen, in his autobiography naively observed: "My name may hereafter be placed amongst the thousand articles of a Biographia Britannica." Gibbon, with his estimate of a thousand articles, would be astounded at the proportion of the present work. Instead of a thousand articles, there are forty thousand, occupying 27,000 pages of text and requiring the use of 40,000,000 words. This production represents the labors of 1,500 specialists and cost $1,150,000 before a single volume was printed. It has occupied for eight years a permanent editorial staff of sixty-four members. Illustrations include 450 full-page plates, 417 maps, and 7,000 illustrations in the text. The index volume contains 500,000 references.

Another new point is that the whole edition of twenty-eight volumes has been published simultaneously. Previous editions have been put out volume by volume. The issue sometimes extending over fourteen years. One is reminded, too, of the galloping pace at which the world is moving. At the time of the publication of the last new edition, telegraphy was as yet the only province in which the usefulness of electricity had been practically established. Of Africa scarcely any knowledge existed save in respect of Cape Colony, Natal, Egypt, and Algeria; the Satsuma revolution represented the last word in Japanese history; the armor-clad ships of the German navy consisting of "7 frigates, 3 corvettes, 7 floating batteries."

A Revolutionary Feature.

Another new, almost revolutionary feature of the present edition is furnished by the use, optional with subscribers, of having the edition printed on India paper. In this way the bulk and weight of the volumes are reduced to one-third of their previous size. In previous editions the size of the volume has been recognized as a serious drawback—quarto volumes weighing close upon seven pounds and measuring 2½ inches thick. On India paper each volume of the new edition, although it contains twenty-five per cent. more matter, measures less than one inch in thickness and weighs not quite three pounds. Formerly two hands were needed to lift a volume of the Encyclopaedia from the shelves; in the new edition a volume may easily be held in one hand and read with all the comfort of an ordinary sized book.

In connection with the introduction of Indian paper it is related that in 1841 a graduate of Oxford returning from the far East, presented to the Clarendon Press a small quantity of paper of unusual thinness, capacity, and toughness. That paper was used for the printing of twenty-four copies of the smallest Bible then known. Subsequent attempts to trace the source of the paper were fruitless, but in 1874 experiments led to the invention of India paper as now known.

The high standing of the contributors of the Encyclopaedia Britannica need not be dilated upon. They represent the foremost men in every department of learning. Canadians will be interested to note that among the authorities who deal with Canada and its history are Dr. Parkin, Prof. A. P. Coleman, Prof. W. L. Grant, Mr. E. H. Godfrey, Prof. G. M. Wrong and Prof. C. W. Colby.

Previous editions with the number of volumes and the mean dates of publication are as follows:

First edition, three volumes, 1770.
Second edition, 10 volumes, 1781.
Third edition, 18 volumes, 1793.
