HOW CAPTAIN JONES ROSE UP

By JOHN GAYLOR

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

Captain Thomas Jones of the Red X Steamship company in general and the steamer Carib in particular had risen to the position of second mate from roustabout and from second mate to chief officer and finally to captain, but he wasn't looked upon as full blown yet. He was a humble looking man, and he was not given to long speeches, but for some reason the steamship company had an idea that should an emergency arise Captain Jones would rise to it and do them honor. If his crews didn't agree with the officials of the company it was because they were hustled about so lively and worked so hard that they hadn't time to study him. It was sufficient for them that he always stuck by his mates, right or wrong, and he had a way of backing them up with belying pins and other hard word substances that never left the referee a chance to call the affair a draw.

HE ORDERED CAPTAIN JONES TO TROT OUT THE DESERTERS.

The Carib was in the South American trade. When a steamer captain goes into the South American trade he is prepared for almost anything that comes along. This includes typhoons and revolutions. Captain Jones had met several typhoons. He had also passed through several revolutions, and yet his opportunity for rising to an occasion had not arrived. The typhoons had found a staunch ship to deal with, and the dictators and revolutionists had been careful to keep their hands off American property. In fact, no matter which side was on top or how many would be dictators were in the field, the whole boiling of them looked for the Red X steamers to bring them the necessary munitions of war, and to interfere with them was to kill the golden goose.

During a certain year, while the Carib was making her trip to New York and return, the people rose against the dictator of one of the small states. The dictator meanwhile had looted the treasury and got away to France. Several new men wanted to take his place, but after a few days of stabbing and throat cutting the number of candidates was reduced to two, and naturally enough they were the worst of the lot. One of them held the capital city and chief port as the Carib steamed in, and the other was fighting to get in. The man who was in wanted the help of the people to hold his job, and he was impressing everything that could fire a gun. He didn't attempt to meddle with the Carib at first beyond declaring her cargo contraband of war and figuring up what his share of the loot would come to; but, catching seven of her crew ashore, he marched them to the intrenchments, put guns in their hands and gave them the choice of shooting at the enemy or being shot themselves. They began wasting his precious ammunition at once, but one day proved to be a sufficiency for them, and at night they deserted and returned to the steamer.

You can't take seven men out of the short handed crew of a steamer without their being missed. Captain Jones missed his seven, and when he heard of the high handed proceedings he got ready for trouble. The deserters had had the good sense to bring their guns along and a few more were scared up after a hunt. Steam pipes were fitted and run to the gangways, barricades erected here and there, and when daylight came next morning the Carib looked like a cross between Noah's ark and a man-of-war.

The dictator didn't lose any time sending for his deserters. He needed their services, and his message was to the effect that they must be given up within thirty minutes or he would open fire on the steamer. Then it was that the latent something in Captain Jones began to rise. He consigned the dictator to a climate where red-hotness prevails the year round, and with his own hands he flogged the arrogant messenger upon the wharf. Half an hour later the dictator appeared in person. He was backed by 200 soldiers, and his men was that of a conqueror as he ordered Captain Jones to trot out the deserters.

"Now hear me," said Captain Jones in reply. "I shall not give up a man. So go ahead and do your worst."

Five minutes later there was a fight on. The dictator's 200 men tried to "rush" the steamer, and half a dozen were killed and a score half cooked by hot steam. Then they posted themselves behind the stone warehouses and swept the steamer's deck with their rifle fire. The dictator then brought up two pieces of cannon, and solid shot tore away the bridge and pilot house and bored their way through the smokestacks and upper cabins. When a score of rounds had been fired Captain Jones said to his chief officer:

"Mr. Merwin, it's time to make a bit of history. Let every man who can stand on his legs fall in behind and follow me."

There were only nineteen. At a signal from the captain they followed him down the gang plank and up the narrow street to where the guns were posted. The dictator was there directing the fire. Before he could realize what was afoot Captain Jones had pulled him from his horse and was shaking him down the street, while the mates led the crew against the artillery and drove them off and upset the guns. Not a man was lost in the dash, and when the shelter of the steamer was reached the dictator was with them as a prisoner. Leaping up on the shattered rail of the steamer, Captain Jones faced the hundred soldiers howling for his blood and said:

"Listen to me. If another shot is fired at this steamer I'll tie a hundred pounds of iron to the feet of your dictator and drop him overboard!"

There was no more firing. A mob gathered and howled and shrieked and cursed, but it ended at that. At the end of a couple of hours a military officer came aboard under a flag of truce to see what terms could be made. He was met at the gangway by Captain Jones, while the dictator was sulking in the cabin under the eyes of a sentry.

"You want your man, I suppose?" queried the captain as he returned the other's salute.

"Well, if you want him to run your side of this old revolution you are a little late. Listen to that!"

There were yelling and cheering and rifle firing all through the streets above them. Dictator No. 2 had taken advantage of the occasion to advance his troops with a rush and capture the city, and the fickle populace were already changing the color of their flags.

Babies in Rome.

The Romans are devoted to their children, although their ways are not our ways. No woman of the better class nurses her child, baby carriages are unknown and swaddling is still in vogue, at least with the lower classes. I know a young American lady, married to a Roman, who imported a perambulator for her first baby. The baby (wet nurse) refused to trundle it, saying she was not strong enough, although I saw her carry a heavy trunk upstairs on her head while I was calling at the house. The baby is now a big eighteen-month-old boy. Every day the baby goes out to give him an airing, carrying him in her arms. Here leading strings are facts, not symbols. In Trastevere the best sight we saw was a darling red haired baby in leading strings stumbling along in front of its grandmother. In the division of labor the care of the children falls upon the grandmother. The mother's time is too valuable. If she is not actually employed in earning money there is the heavier work of the household to do. To use the pet phrase of the boarders, "things are different here from what they are at home."—Maud Howe in Lippincott's.

Not That Sort.

A good story is told of one of the Cape Town volunteers. He had been at the front for a month or two and was pretty well tired of the endless traveling, lack of rations, etc. So that he considered he was lucky when one day he came across the general, who was doing a tour of inspection.

He shouted: "Hello, mister! You, I want to speak to you!"

The general, turning, found he was the "mister" so politely hailed.

"Well, my man," he said. "What do you want with me?"

"I want to get a furlough, mister, that's what I want," was the reply.

"Why do you want a furlough, my man?" inquired the general.

"Well, I want to go home and see my wife."

"How long is it since you saw her?"

"Ever since I enlisted, nearly three months ago."

"Three months!" exclaimed the commander. "Why, my good fellow, I have not seen my wife in three years!"

The bold hero looked incredulous and then drawled out:

"Oh, but, you see, me and my wife ain't that sort!"—Glasgow Herald.

Something For Their Money.

Some years ago a railway was being made in the neighborhood of Galashiels, and it was arranged that each of the numerous navies employed should pay a penny per week to a medical practitioner, so that they might have his services in the event of accident or illness in the case of illness.

During the summer and autumn neither illness nor accident occurred.

But, when a severe winter followed, all at once the "navies" began to call on the doctor for castor oil.

Each brought his bottle, into which an ounce was poured until the oil was exhausted, and the doctor was forced to send to Edinburgh for a further supply.

When that, too, was getting done the doctor one day quietly asked a decent looking fellow what was wrong with the men that they required so much castor oil.

"Nothing wrong at all, doctor," he replied, "but we grease our big boots with it!"—London News.

WAS INCURABLE BUT IS CURED

Joseph Boons at Work Again After Seven Years Illness

Discharged from the Hospital as Incurable, he used Dodd's Kidney Pills with Splendid Results.

Cottle's Cove, New Bay, Nfld., Oct. 12.—(Special).—After being for seven years a hopeless invalid, unable to work and racked by aches and pains, Joseph Boons of this place is back at his old work as a fisherman. It sounds like a miracle but it is not—it was Kidney Disease was the matter with him. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

"It is something worth relating what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me," says Mr. Boons, "and I am glad to tell it. I had doctored with several doctors and after seven months in the hospital was sent home as incurable."

"Richard Quirk, who had been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised me to try them and I did. I took 21 boxes before I was able to do any work. But I can hardly believe it is myself in it at all after all those years of suffering."

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure all forms of Kidney Disease. Backache to Bright's Disease. Thousands of cured will tell you so.

When you conquer your enemy by force, his better part remains unconquered.
