

At Pike River, Stanbridge, I found a well organized, well conducted interesting Sabbath School, under the care of the Rev. Mr. Jersey, Baptist Minister, and Rev. Mr. Selly, Wesleyan Methodist Minister; one other small school in Stanbridge, conducted by a devoted Christian man. At Stanbridge Ridge their Sabbath School had stopped on account of their principle teacher having to leave town, but I succeeded in stirring them up to re-establish their school and send for a library. In another School District, in the same town, they came to a resolution to establish a Sabbath School and get a library. At Philipsburgh village I found two well conducted promising Sabbath Schools; one belonged to the Wesleyan Methodists, the other to the Congregationalists; another about three miles from the village, a union of Wesleyan Methodists and Congregationalists, well conducted. At the request of Mr Selly, I went to Pigeon Hill, about six miles from Philipsburgh, where he had it in contemplation to establish a Sabbath School, and delivered a lecture, after which the school was established and a library sent for.

With the Rev. Mr. Fisk, I visited a neighbourhood of wealthy farmers, back from Philipsburgh about six miles, one of his preaching stations. They had no preaching there for a long time, until Mr. Fisk went there. I spent two days with him in visiting from house to house, and holding meetings in the evening. I found, in this neighbourhood, a large number of promising young men and women, several of whom appeared to be anxiously enquiring what they should do to be saved, and a general seriousness on the minds of all. They were desirous to have a Sabbath School; Mr. Fisk concluded to establish one and become responsible for a library for its use. At Henryville they were awake to the importance of having a Sabbath School, and when I left they were circulating a subscription list to get a library, which they intend to send for this week and commence their school. At Brockville School District, about three miles from Henryville, they became very much engaged on the subject, and the few Protestants, English and French, raised ten dollars, which they gave me for a library.

In visiting the above field, seeing so much that needed to be done, and so few efficient labourers, my heart has been pained and my mind has been so exercised on the subject, that I have not only laboured, according to my ability, day and evening, but many a night I have wept over the moral desolations, and prayed that God would raise up labourers.

Some places where I visited, and where Millerism had prevailed to some extent, there seemed to be an awakening in the minds of some, to the importance of the Scriptural instruction of the rising generation, that they might not be carried away by every wind of doctrine.

There is one thing more that I cannot refrain from mentioning, that is, all the Ministers whom I have called upon, of different denominations, (with the exception of two), entered heartily into the object of my labours, and when I left, said they were glad I
