

RADWAY'S RENOVATING RESOLVENT.

THE medical term resolution signifies the restoration of the morbid properties and functions of an organ or tissue to their natural state, and if constitutional invigoration is effected while this salutary local change is in progress, the medicine which produces the double result is strictly and literally a "Renovating Resolvent."

The theory that all ulcerous, cutaneous, and glandular diseases—with many other painful and dangerous maladies that can not be technically classified under those heads, are due to the presence of a poisonous element in the blood, is of ancient date; but it never has been nor can be controverted or shaken, because it is founded on undisputable facts. We know that physical infirmities are sometimes transmitted in families from generation to generation, and it is self-evident that the only medium through which they can be thus propagated is that fluid whence every secretion, every gland, muscle, bone, sinew and fibre which make up the human frame is primarily derived. If the red current that flows through the veins and arteries is pure, the body can not be diseased; if it be impure, bodily health is a physical impossibility.

Each portion of our structure abstracts from the blood (which according to modern physiologists consists of seventeen elements) precisely the constituents necessary for its own sustainment, and if the elements thus secreted are empoisoned, disease in some shape or other is the inevitable consequence. A corrupt tree will not bring forth good fruit neither can corrupted blood be converted into healthy flesh and fibre.

To expel from the circulation the poison which generates many of the most terrible disorders that affect humanity, and to recruit the constitutional elasticity and vigor which those disorders necessarily impair, is the important province of Radway's Renovating Resolvent.

It may be thought strange, perhaps, that one medicine should be applicable to so large a number of ailments as are claimed to be within the remedial scope of this powerful vegetable purifier and invigorant. But the truth is that the generic diseases are few although their manifestations are almost infinite in variety.

Thus Scrofula takes innumerable shapes which are distinguished by different names, and unfortunately for the sufferers, are treated in as many different ways; although a radical and permanent cure of any of them can only be effected by extirpating from the blood the vitiating agent which is the dread parent of them all.

Scrofulous diseases are often seemingly cured by suppressive medication. No superficial trace of them is left. But are they therefore extinct? Not so. They may be said to lie perdu in the vital fluid, awaiting an opportunity for re-development. They slumber but they are not dead.

While all is fair without,

"Corruption, mining all within,
INFECTS UNSEEN."
