McKenzie's Brandon Market Cabbage

Whether for medium early or late use, it stands monarch of all. The cabbage illustrated here was one picked at raw m from a large field, and is an average size, weighing 21½ lbs.. It is probably the safest to plant as it does well at all seasons. Grows quickly, very firm, tight heads. Is well adapted to this climate. Pkt. 10c, oz. 25c., ½ lb. 60c.

any information on this subject, I would be so glad. I thought perhaps some reader of the page would know of someone in need of a home. Another subject I have had in mind was the "Trade System." No matter what produce we have, all we can get is trade, although there are doctor's bills, etc., that could not be paid for in that way, and it is very awkward sometimes. The remedy you spoke of Dame Durden, is hardly practicable in the small towns, as one woman in this neighborhood alone could supply every family in our town, and one other the boarding houses. Then what will the other hundred or so women do? A good number of our neighbors ship to Winnipeg, finding this the most satisfactory to do.

Only your kind assurance that all are welcome and that you would cut down and correct the letters, gave me courage to write. Please do with this as you think best and greatly oblige, Sask. WIFE NO. TWO.

(We feel as if you "belong", too, after reading your nice long letter. I am very sorry to hear of your husband's helplessness. It must grieve him to At present I do not know where you could get a girl to help, but shall send you word the minute I get any information. I hope any of the members who can help in this difficulty will write in promptly and let us know.

I agree with you that having to take trade for your produce is a great dis-advantage when all your wants cannot be supplied by the merchant who takes stuff. It isn't much encourage your ment to do your trading in your home town. D. D.)
