And Mr. Castle, than whom there is no better authority in Canada on this matter makes it clear that even to handle this year's traffic St. John must greatly improve its facilities. More grain storing and carrying canacity especially is needed at once both on the west and the east sides of the harbor And more berths will soon be required; more dredging; a deeper and wider channel; and soon the equipment of the new harbor in Courtenay Bay with its wonderful possibilities of expansion. And all these things-necessary things if St. John is to develop as a national port-are impossible for the
