PAY THE WOMEN LIKE MEN.

By Carrie Chapman-Catt.

There is no reason in the world which can endure the test of examination why men and women should not receive equal wages for equal work. The quality of the work and not sex should be the one consideration to govern the price paid for labor. If the woman performs her service in the slightest degree less well than the man who is her co-worker she should be paid less; but on the other hand, if the man is the inferior worker he should be paid less than the woman. The old argument that a man takes up a business for life and a woman for only a brief period previous to marriage does not apply to the profession of teaching. Men who adopt teaching for a business do so very largely as a stepping stone to a permanent choice for life. Of the tens of thousands of men who enter the profession only hundreds remain in it for a life-work. On the other hand, very many women make it the only business of a life. It is not unusual to find women who have taught in the public schools for twenty-five years and upward.

Nor does the argument, once highly respected, that the man marries and must consequently receive more wages bear close scrutiny. It is wise to apply to public affairs the same common sense and economy which is found useful in private life. An employer engaging a man bookkeeper, typewriter or secretary ascertains the quality of work the candidate can perform and offers a compensation appropriate. The married or unmarried state of the man does not enter into consideration. The quality of work of the teacher should in the same manner set the ratio of wages. If he marries and finds himself encumbered with financial responsibilities beyond his income, it is his own affair and taxpayers should feel no obligation to him on that account. Common sense should dictate that if a fair return is to be given for work plus an amount sufficient to support a family in order to encourage correct family life, justice should add the same amount to the salaries of women who are burdened with the support of families.

Women have demonstrated that in the profession of teaching they can not only perform their work equal to men, but popular sentiment agrees that the average woman teacher is superior to the average male teacher. To insist upon paying men teachers more than women teachers for the same work is a remnant of tradition which deserves condemnation at the hands of every progressive citizen.

A careful analysis of the changed economic conditions of women will reveal the fact that the secret reason for paying women less than men lies in the fact that men are voting citizens and women are not. When this Government stamps its approval upon the man and says, "Your opinion shall be put into the ballot box where it will count; if you have grievances you may right them there," it adds a dignity and importance to that man he would not possess before. He may be poor and ignorant, but "he's a man for a' that." When the same Government says, "The woman, 'Your opinion shall not be counted at the ballot-box; if you have grievances others must right them." It cheapens her as a unit of society. She may be well educated, intelligent, but "she's a woman for a' that." It cheapens her intelligence, and consequently her labor.

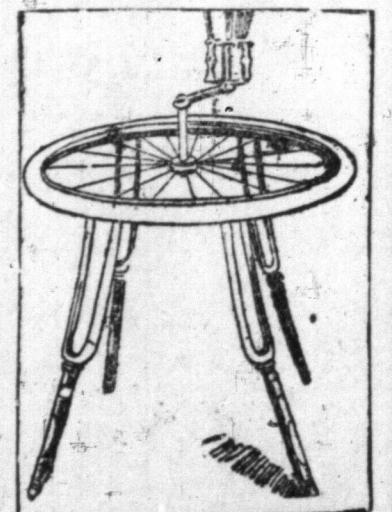

In Wyoming, where women have had equal suffrage with men for thirty years there is a law which compels employers to pay men and women equally for equal work. Neither the opinions nor the services of women are held to be cheap there.

The wages of teachers should be generous. They hold the most responsible positions in the community. Their hands lie the future destiny of our land. The wages of men teachers should not come down to the level of the women teacher. The women's wages should go up to the level of men's wages. If this is impossible, by raising the wages of men and lowering the wages of women. This is the dictum of no theory or philanthropy, but the demand of justice and fair play.

Beauty's Month.

The mouth is the frankest part of the face. It can neither hide ill-temper with its nor good. We may affect what we please, but affections will not help us. In a wrong cause it will only make our observers resent the endeavor to impose upon them. A month should be of good natural dimensions, as well as of the lips. When the ancients, among their beauties, made mention of small mouths and lips; they meant small only as opposed to an excess the other way, a fault very common in the South. The saying in favor of small mouths, which have been the ruin of so many pretty looks, are very absurd. If there must be an excess either way, it had better be the liberal one. A pretty, pursed-up month is fit for nothing but to be left to its pliancy. Large mouths are often found in union with generous dispositions than very small ones.

Free medical advice. Men and women suffering from chronic diseases are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter, absolutely without fee or charge. For more than thirty years as chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Pierce has devoted himself to the treatment and cure of chronic forms of disease. Assisted by his staff of nearly a score of physicians, each man a specialist, his success has been phenomenal. Ninety-eight persons in every hundred treated being absolutely and altogether cured. Women have especially availed themselves of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter, thereby avoiding the unpleasant questioning, the obnoxious examinations, and odious local treatments considered necessary by some practitioners. Over half a million women have been treated by Dr. Pierce and his staff for diseases peculiar to women, with unvarying success. Write without fear as without fee. Every letter is treated as strictly private and sacredly confidential, and all answers are sent in plain envelopes bearing no printing upon them. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Falling in love is the one illogical adventure, the one thing of which we are tempted to think as supernatural, in our trite and reasonable world. — R. L. Stevenson.

Astounded the Editor.

Editor A. A. Brown, of Benningville, S. C., was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from Dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and, after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything, is a grand tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Stomach and Liver Troubles it's a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50c at A. I. McCall & Co.'s Drug Store.

The Old Man's Occupation.

"It's a queer world," said the old man, "when you come to think it over. You know, I educated Jim for a lawyer."

"Yes?"

"An' Bill for a preacher?"

"An' Tom for one o' these here literary fellers?"

"I've heard so."

"An' Dick for a doctor?"

"Yes."

"Well now, what do you reckon I'm a-doin' at?"

"Can't say."

"Well, sir, you must not believe it, but I'm a-supporter of Jim an' Bill, an' Tom an' Dick, an' it keeps me a-go'in' from daylight to dark!"

Rule That Works Both Ways.

"I have frequently observed," said the vegetarian, "that when a man lives on beef he becomes something like an ox; if he eats mutton he looks sheepish, and if he eats pork the chances are he will grow awfully fat."

"Perhaps you are right," said the startled Alderman. "I have also observed that when a man lives on nothing but vegetables he is apt to be pretty small potatoes." — Chicago News.

All Actuated by the same Spirit.

A number of small children were industriously lighting matches and burning the edges of a small flag which one of their number held.

"Why, children, what are you doing?" exclaimed a patriotic young woman who was passing.

"We're making a new flag out of it," said the equally patriotic children.

Small Philosopher.

"Mamma, de baby's kyun," said a little girl, glancing up from her playing.

The mother paid no heed.

"Mamma, de baby's kyun," said the mother did not heed.

The little girl arose, went over to the crib, and looked down sympathetically upon the bundle of pink and white.

"Nebber mind, baby. 'Dis is a troublemaker. 'Tis you're turn to 'till hab to ky a heap o' times and tobody'll notice you."

A Very Small Piece.

She—Have you forgotten how you once said you would give the world for me?

He—What if I did?

"Oh, nothing, particular; but it seems quite a shame-don't you see?—that I should have a new wheel."

A Soul's Kiss.

By Virginia Easton.

The window that faced the west was open. The dying man looked over the bay into sky, a sea of purple whose waves were flecked with crimson foam, to the sun that seemed like some fair child, at anchor.

"It is waiting for me," he thought, "to bear me out into the night."

There were faint sounds of prayer, broken by choking sobs in the room.

And then—

"Come," said the Angel of Death.

But the soul lingered, and to the Loved One whispered "I am at rest."

"He will send His Comforter," murmured the Angel, gently.

Then together the Angel and the soul departed through the open casement.

Now, as they passed over the garden they came to a corner where a rosebush grew, and it was a flower that the man of the soul and the Loved One had both loved.

"On," spoke the Angel, for the soul had paused.

But the soul pleaded: "May I not kiss this pure bud that it may tell the Loved One when she walks here how much I loved and love her?"

The Angel bowed his head.

The soul kissed the scarlet bloom, and they went onward toward the west.

Behind them lay a stream of golden light, before them a path of wondrous jewels.

Behold! The blossoms of the rosebush that were hitherto as red as blood were now as white as the pure soul of a child.

So, when the Loved One, her heart bitter with the salt of tears, saw the fair flowers, she understood and was content.

How to Make Miso soup.

For a "burro" of sixty gallons the fire is started at 2 o'clock in the morning, and at half past 1 o'clock in the afternoon the "burro" is ready to serve to the hungry. Here is a list of the ingredients of a "burro":

Twenty-five pounds of beef bones sawed short for the extraction of the marrow.

Forty to fifty fat half-grown chickens chopped into small pieces.

Seventy-five half-grown squirrels, especially the saddles, with the brains, which are full of brains.

One large Gulf of Mexico turtle chopped into small pieces.

Twenty-five pounds of fresh pork.

Twelve pounds of Jersey butter, browned and drawn.

Fifteen pounds of old ham, chopped fine.

One bushel of Irish potatoes, sliced.

Ten bushels of scarlet tomatoes.

Four bushels of onions.

Three bushels of carrots.

The milk of 100 sweet roasting ears of corn.

Five pounds of macaroni.

All the vegetables in season in proportion.

Two hundred to 300 pounds of cayenne pepper, chopped fine.

When the "burro" is done it is the color of rich old burgundy. Brood has been fried and cut into dice. Every man has a gallon dip and a big spoon.

The cup is three-quarters filled with "burro" and the dice thrown in.

"It's a good advertisement for you, my dear," responded his better half. "Your creditors see it and take it for granted that you are prospering and can afford it, so they don't press their claims. See?"

NEWS FROM THE SHIRT WAIST COUNTER.

A Long Pulse Is Needed, for, in the Lexicon of Fancy Bodices There Is No Such Word as Cheap.

If the fancy bodice or shirt waist, as it is also called, is not a success from a beauty standpoint this season, the failure will not be the fault of the dressmakers; for the expensive materials employed in the building of this article and the many tedious hours spent upon it testify to the effort on the part of its designers to make it both beautiful and original.

One of the daintiest confections that has yet appeared is the design reproduced in this column. It is developed in Valenciennes insertion sewed over white silk and combined with bands of satin ribbon so arranged that they produce a striped effect.
