

BALLYBAY.

AN IRISH TALE OF THE PRESENT DAY.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE DEATH OF THE JUDGE.
The Judge was carried into the house and laid upon his bed. For hours he remained senseless, without uttering a single word. Everybody expected that he would pass away to death in this condition, but this prospect filled the Judge's wife with the wildest terror.

Her love for her husband was as ardent now as on the day when they were married. Of politics she knew nothing. When her husband was the patriotic leader, whose praise was in every mouth; when he was the traitor, whom everybody cursed, she loved him with precisely the same strength. And the abuse heaped upon him, by his political opponents, appeared to her but the slander of men who envied his talents and withered beneath his power.

But she looked at her husband's relations to religion in a very different way. She herself was an intensely religious woman. The shadow of a doubt in the truth of the Catholic Church had never crossed her mind. She had never lost mass on a Sunday or holiday, unless so ill as to be unable to leave her house.

She knew that her husband neglected mass and the sacraments; that when heated by wine he often spoke in scoff of what she thought awful mysteries; she knew that he had exposed to the ridicule of Protestants those whom she regarded as the ministers of the Most High.

Day and night a terrible shadow overclouded her soul—the fear that her husband's soul was in danger of eternal condemnation.

First she remonstrated with the Judge, and was laughed at. Then she spoke in anger, and was grossly insulted; and finally had to relapse into tearful silence. Every day of her life she prayed for his conversion; for that object she offered up her masses, her confessions, her charities. Going to her Jesuit director, the poor woman would ask piteously—“What, oh! what could she, weak and helpless, do to avert the terrible doom overhanging him that was more to her than all the world; and was only soothed at last when he—a good, kind-hearted man—one day told her that for years he, too, had prayed constantly that the sinner might be brought to repentance.”

And now the terrible doom so long dreaded so much prayed against, had come. Her husband lay at the threshold of Eternity; and his soul, steeped in mortal sin, was about to pass away without the absolving waters of confession.

Two hours more and the Judge was observed to move, and shortly after began to groan heavily now and then. As the hours went by, the groans became deeper and more frequent, and at last he began to make convulsive movements, and had to be held down.

The bodily agony that was thus expressed was nothing to the mental agony through which the unhappy man was passing. For at that moment when the groans began first to be heard had commenced the return of consciousness.

His whole life passed before his mind—or rather not his whole life, but only that part of it which he would have most gladly forgotten.

EPPE'S COCOA. — GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING. — “By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.” — Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. — Sold only in Packets labelled — “J. J. & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, 48 Threadneedle Street, and 170, Piccadilly; Works, Euston Road and Camden Town, London.”

Life is the vibration received by all animated beings from the Creator's breath. Life is caloric, electricity and phosphorus acting upon a mass of bones and softer solids, diffusing warmth, motion, and animation, activity of muscle, of nerve and of intellect.

As caloric, electricity and phosphorus are induced and supplied by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, it only requires the administration of this successful invention to fortify the feeble, give vigour to the languid, and bring about a condition which not only secures tenaciousness of life but makes life really enjoyable.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, Physicians, Bankers, Railway Managers, and all classes of business men engaged in large operations, usually maintain the nervous system at a constant pitch for protracted periods, owing to the intense activity of the mind necessary to great intellectual efforts or important commercial transactions. Here the organism does not get sufficient rest to restore the used-up vital forces, and general prostration, sooner or later, must inevitably result. These over-worked brains will find Dr. WARRER'S Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Caloric of singular efficacy in sustaining them through extreme trials of mental toil by its action as a nerve tonic.
