This is an age of enlightenment. Apparently our opposition friends are becoming enlightened on the resources and requirements of their country, or the country is becoming enlightened on the relations between the Conservative press and the Canadian Northern Railway Company.

HIS TROUBLES

Mr. Armand Lavergne, member for Montmagny, took the opportunity a few days since to inform the House of Commons and whosoever else it might concern, that he was at outs with the government. The announcement was scarcely important enough or new enough to merit the attention it has received from the Conservative press. Since the member for Montmagny appeared in the bye-election in support of an opponent of the government, the country has been laboring under no painful uncertainty as to what were the relations and sentiments of that gentleman toward the government. By way of settling the uncertainty that may have existed and establishing the grounds of his disagreement Mr. Lavergne recounted the instances on which he had opposed the government. These were four in number. The first was the North-West school question when he considered that Mr. Bourassa and himself alone represented the constitutional rights of the minority. The second was regarding the immigra- policy too Pacific. tion policy of the government, which he considered did not secure the quality of settlers he desired; the third was on the Sunday bill which he considered "the most unfair measure" ever passed by the House and undermining the liberty of the citizen; the fourth was on the question of whether or not the revised statutes should be published in the French language. This should make clear enough the degree of responsibility which the government bears for the nationalistic propaganda carried on by Mr. Lavergne and Mr. Bour-
