LONDON, June 7.
General attack on Turkish trenches in southern area of the Gallipoli peninsula took place on the 3rd of June, supported by the fleet. Considerable advance was made at many points, but owing to heavy barbed wire entanglements at one point, the advance was prevented, a considerable portion of the captured trench was subsequently abandoned. The net results was an advance of 100 yards, and two lines of Turkish trenches captured along a front of nearly three miles. The new positions are now being strengthened.

The French Government report continued severe fighting near Arras. German attacks were repulsed with considerable gains at various points. South of the Alsne two successive lines of trenches and enemy positions were captured with 200 prisoners and three guns.

Zeppelin raid occurred on the southeast coast of England on Friday night and again on last night. The latter caused two deaths. Persons were killed and 40 injured. Zeppelin shed near Brussels was set on fire by our air force last night. The flames reached great height. It is unknown whether there was a Zeppelin inside. British airman bombed a Zeppelin between Ghent and Brussels, this morning. At 6,000 feet the airship was hit and fell burning to the ground. The force of the explosion caused the British attacking machine to spin down, causing the pilot to be killed in enemy country, but he returned his machine and returned to his base.

At this time of the year Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters is especially valuable. The blood is apt to be clogged with impurities which are the cause of headaches, indigestion and that tired feeling which comes with the spring.

Dr. Wilson's Herbine Bitters have stood the test of fifty years and have proved to be a true blood purifier.

full announcement of the Government's policy regarding recruiting would be made later, he said.

ENGLAND AND ITALY.

LONDON, June 7.
Alluding to the intervention of Italy, the Premier said that during half a century there has never been a shadow of discord between the two nations. We regard her as one custodian of the free traditions of Europe. We warmly grasp the hand of Italy, and welcome the gallant soldiers and sailors as fellow-comrades in the struggle on which the liberty of the world depends.

IN THE PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, June 7.
Fredk. G. Kellaway, Liberal, asked whether the Government has the power of stopping the campaign of the group of newspapers which endeavored to prevent men from joining the Army by refusing to publish Kitchener's appeal for more men and violently attacking its conditions; whether the Government is aware that these attacks came from the same source as did recent attacks on Kitchener. Tennant, the Under-Secretary of War, replied that the action of these journals had stimulated the response to Kitchener's appeal, and he believed the men required would be rapidly available. Tennant's answer was greeted with cheers.

Kellaway asked an assurance from the Coalition Government that this malignant press will not be able to continue its attacks on the leaders of the nation. Tennant said he thought this action was not necessary.

Home Secretary Simon moved the second reading of the bill, establishing the Ministry of Munitions, and explained that the new Department would concern itself with the supply of munitions, but that the fighting departments would determine the nature, extent and urgency of their needs. The Home Secretary said that the army wanted as many shells as organized industry was capable of producing as quickly as possible.

Lord Robert Cecil made his first appearance in the Commons as spokesman for the Foreign Office, today. Replying to the question whether Britain had sent to China and Japan a note similar to the American note, as to the China-Japanese treaty, Lord Robert said that both the Japanese and Chinese Governments were aware of the views of His Majesty's Government on the subject.

The Munitions Bill evoked some opposition.
