thanked all for their kindly reference, and for their whole-hearted friendship, which he very highly appreciated. During his many years in the service he had never found such a hospitable and kindly people as those in Newfoundland, and he would forever cherish the many happy associations of these days. He felt it a very great privilege to have been of any little assistance to the trade and the public.

He had always endeavoured to do his duty as well as it was possible, and in conclusion he hoped that the country would enjoy a full measure of pros-
