LADY IRIS' MISTAKE; Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"I am glad Lady Avice has another son. I never feel quite easy when everything depends on one. No one knows how anxious I used to be for white John was a child. If he had died, all my plans would have come to nothing. Now, if anything happens to him—which Heaven forbid—he has two sons to succeed him. I feel proud that they have given the second little one my name—Richard." It was very nice of Lady Avice to think of it. Lady Avice is always nice to us. I have been thinking, Julia, that if the Government make me an offer of a baronetcy again, I shall accept it. It is such a different thing now that John is married and has children.

"I think it would be as well," replied his wife. At very nearly the same time Lady Avice was saying to her husband—
"John, do you not think it would be better for us to ask your father and mother over here for a time? They will like to see Sir Fulke. They seem very pleased at Marie's engagement."

"You can please yourself, Avice," he answered; "you will be sure to do right."

"Take a little more interest in it than that, John," his wife told him, and he tried to rouse himself. A change that every one remarked had come over John Bardon. He had grown quiet and almost gentle. There was always an expression of deep thought on his face. Even the children failed at times to amuse him. The little heir tried his best, and baby Richard clapped his hands with glee when in his father's presence; but John Bardon smiled upon the children in an absent fashion. He was haunted by a ghost; and it was the ghost of Lady Iris.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt relief. This is a remedy in nature, and saves you about $1.
You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several powerful elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose. The cough syrups are combinations of pine and sugar syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup. To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pine in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn-syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make it up—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It's pure, good, and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.
You can feel this taste of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—irritation of the throat. Pine-syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less—splendid for: Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping-cough, or any ordinary throat ailment.
It is a highly concentrated, compound of essential Norway pine extracts, and its famous the world over for its medicinal properties.
"Surely, my dear, it is just as you say," replied the millionaire. It began to dawn upon him that praise of a pretty woman would hardly afford pleasure to a plain one.
Some weeks afterward the wedding took place, and Marie thought herself the happiest woman in the world. How long and how dearly she had loved handsome Mr. Fulke none but herself knew.

The Heir of Bayneham

—AND—
Lady Hutton's Ward.

CHAPTER II.

Education was all very well for Miss Erskine; she would perhaps marry a lord; but his Magdalen had nothing to look to except succeeding her mother in the management of the little household. So Magdalen learned to read and write, and nothing more; but nature allows of no interference, and she had originally intended Magdalen Burns for something more than the "guide wife" of a poor, honest Scotchman. The girl had a dowry that sometimes a princess lacks; she was gifted with wonderful beauty—beauty not common with those of her class—refined, delicate, and sensitive. Her face was lovely, spiritual, and full of poetry; her violet eyes were clear and true; the sweet, sensitive lips were charming in their sunny smiles.

The little hands, trained to break and bake, retained their whiteness; the tall, graceful figure was not spoiled by the life of almost rude labor. Nature does strange things, and she had given to this daughter of a Scotch peasant beauty and grace that might have been envied by a queen.

Miss Erskine, Magdalen Burnes's foster-sister, in no way resembled her. She was perfectly well-bred, with a cool, calm, stately manner, somewhat dignified and haughty, and a clear, fair, patrician face; but no one ever thought of calling the heiress of Brynmar a beauty. Despite the difference of rank and position, there was a warm attachment between the two girls. Miss Erskine often left her stately home to roam in the woods with the lovely young girl whose face every one declared resembled a picture. At times Magdalen Burns was asked to the Hall, but her father never wished her to go there; perhaps he had some presentiment of the fate that would overtake his daughter. He heard nothing but her praises, and he did not want her head to be turned with flattery. When gentlemen visitors at the Hall, having heard of the beauty of his only child, called on different pretences at the cottage, Donald received them very coldly, and gave imperative orders that his daughter should always remain in her room while visitors were in the house.

Miss Erskine had many lovers, but she cared only for one, that was the young Lord Hutton, the handsomest, gayest, wildest man in all the Highlands—reckless, careless, debonaire. Lord Hutton, the prodigal son of a prodigal race. He liked Miss Erskine, and his friends advised him to marry her; she would be rich, and he needed money. Lord Hutton did not decide all at once; he went frequently to the Hall, and on one occasion took his favorite boon companion, Stephen Hurst, with him.

Stephen found his visit a very dull one; he did not care for the compositions of Sir Ralph or the inanities of Lady Erskine. Both bored him alike, and besides, there was no billiard-table at the Hall. Lady Erskine disapproved of gambling in even its innocent branches; a game at billiards was something very terrible in her eyes. Miss Erskine never appeared to see or notice any one except Lord Hutton, and the other guests were summed up by Mr. Hurst in his amiable way as "a mixture of bores and nobodies."

"Lady Iris was not well," said Lady Avice, coming to her husband's assistance; "and the earl thought a change would be good for her."
"Still I cannot see why they should stay in that dull spot in the North," continued the millionaire. "I am told that Fenton Woods is pretty place, but a dull as ditch-water."
"Lady Avice arched her brows at the word "ditch-water."
"Lady Iris was very proud; but I liked her," Richard Bardon went on; "and we miss her handsome face. She was very off-hand and lofty in her ways, but her ladyship; but she was pleasant to look at."
"Handsomeness is that handsome does," put in Lady Avice; and the millionaire bowed deferentially.
"Certainly, my dear, it is just as you say," replied the millionaire. It began to dawn upon him that praise of a pretty woman would hardly afford pleasure to a plain one.

Some weeks afterward the wedding took place, and Marie thought herself the happiest woman in the world. How long and how dearly she had loved handsome Mr. Fulke none but herself knew.

Good Rifle Shots Must Learn How to Wink.

PORT AU PORT.—In preparation for the first national rifle match to be held in Haiti, the American officers of the Haitian Gendarmerie are engaged in teaching their native riflemen how to wink. When rifle practice was taken up in earnest for the first time this year among the native troops, their instructors were immediately confronted with the practically universal failure of the gendarmes to close their left eye when sighting along the Springfield barrels. Experiments showed that they were unable to close one eye without closing the other, or to open one eye without opening the other. At first the experiment of putting a patch over the left eye, or tying a handkerchief across it, had to be resorted to. As this did not prove satisfactory Gen. Douglas C. MacDonal, Chief of the Gendarmerie and a shot of national reputation in the United States, instructed his officers to teach the gendarmes the principles of winking. At the recent departmental shoot, held to select eight men teams for the national match, the scores made by the leading gendarmes would have compared creditably with that of the more experienced marines. The gendarmes are absorbed in their newly found skill, and the spirit of rivalry is so keen that President Borno has offered to the best individual shot a gold watch and an autographed letter of commendation. With that champagne will go the unwritten title of the most expert winker in a country where winking has been a lost art until the last few weeks.
