She saw that she had gone too far, that she must change her tactics, or forever lose all influence with him, and make an enemy of him.

She could ill afford to do this for several reasons.

She was the widow of Lord Percival Linton, who had married her chiefly for her large dowry.

He had been a fast, unprincipled man, who had run through his own property and most of hers before her death put an end to his mad career.

They had one son, Percy, and a daughter, Illian, and Lady Linton, with her two hildren, had been largely dependent upon the generosity of her brother ever since her has band's death, and he was even now bearing all the expense of the education of his bephew and niece.

They had made their home chiefly at fleathdale, because Lady Linton's pride rould not tolerate life at Linton Grange when they had no means to keep it up in proper style, and it was very pleasant and c. miortable to be in her brother's home, where there was abundance of everything, and whore she had been allowed to manage when they had no means to keep it up in proper style, and it was very pleasant and c. miortable to be in her brother's home, had been allowed to manage when they had no means to keep it up in proper style, and it was very pleasant and c. miortable to be in her brother's home, had been allowed to manage when they had no means to keep it up in proper style, and it was very pleasant and c. miortable to be in her brother's home, in the way of the marry the daughter of one to the brother had been in the way of seeing a deal of the cotte, thus ecuring a fine position to the future mistress at Heatidale.

A late Roman newspaper received at Chicago announces that ex-Prime Ministry Crispl, with a number of friends, will visit the exposition during the early summer months.

Annual you, Miriam, Sir William responded, as he opened the door for his sister to pass out, but he spoke somewhat coidly.

He could not lightly forgive and overlook the scorn that had been heaped upon the darling of his heart, while the fact that his marriage had been kept a scoret angreed him exceedingly, and placed him in a very unpleasant position.

He resolved that as soon as his mother should be better, he would have a plain talk with her, also, and insistupon an announcement of Lady Heath's existence and her expected arrival. But until the invalid was out of danger he deemed it advisable not to create any excitement on the subject.

CHAPTER XII.

"I WILL JON TOU HEART AND HAND."

Later in the day, while Sir William was "aged with the steward looking over economic stand inquiring into the condition of Heathdale generally, Lady Linton went tuicity up to her brother's rooms to attend to the unpacking of his trunks and putting his wardrobe in order.

While thus engaged she came across a warn portfolio filled with papers of values. Sheknew at once that it was nothing that zeronetons much of interest begarding the despised girl whom he had arried in the far west of America.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2.—Reine Duhaute, a pretty French girl, after having Frenchman who came to this country in Mutual friends started a correspondence betwean Mile. Duhante and Felix Dunas, a Frenchman who came to this country in 1890 and bought a ranch in Oklahoma. The correspondence led to the engagement of the two, although they had never seen each other. Finally the day was set for the wedding, and Mile. Duhaute, who was a governess at the time in an Englishman's family in London, started for America to meet her intended husband. The meeting place was to have been the office of French Consul Long. Mile. Duhaute arrived prompt on time, but M. Dunas failed to put in an appearance. Consul Long wrote to the tardy lover and received a reply from Dunas that he had changed his mind, and that he did not now desire to marry Mile. Duhaute. This drove the little Frenchwoman distracted and she threatened to commit suicide. Having no friends in this country and no means to return home. Consul Long informed her mistress in London of the situation by cable, the latter cabled funds for Mile. Duhaute to return to London, and she has started on her homeward voyage. her homeward voyage.

Children Playing Crack the Whip Go Through the Ico. OWEN SOUND, Jan. 2.—A thrilling accident occurred on the bay, opposite Brooke, which, incredible as it may appear, was not attended with any serious result.

Brooke, which, incredible as it may appear, was not attended with any serious result. A dozen or more of the young residents of the village, among whom were the sons and daughters of Messrs. Graham, Equire, Hill, Rev. Hartley. Bishop, Ross, etc., were epicying themselves skating, about 100 feet east of where lies the hull of the old Spray.

They had joined hands to play crack the whip, when the leader fell, and the followers tumbled together in a heap. The ice gave way under the combined weight, and in a moment all were precipitated into ten feet of very cold water.

By dint of much scrambling, the boys bravely helping the girls, all were got safely out, fortunately getting off with nothing else than a cold bath. The escape from drowning was certainly most wonderful.

CAUSE OF THE HOG FAMINE New Yorkers Say That Chicago Packers Were Caught in a squeeze.

New Yorkers Say That Chicage Packers
Were Gaught in a squeeze.

New York, Jan. 2.—The story from Chicage about the hog famine in the west is not believed by local commission men, who allege that some western packers have been caught in a squeeze and are giving this as an excuse. John Chinamon, a well-known commission merchant and member of the Produce Exchange, says: "The statement of the packers, that the hog famine is due to the spring rains, is all bosh. The whole amount of it is that Phil Armour and the other usually long-headed nen got nipped in a little squeeze operated by such men as Charlie Wright and John Cudahy, of Chicage, and now they haven't got the pork and can't get it. The speculation in corn, which was carried on so extensively, put the price up so high that the farmers found it much more profitable to market their corn than feed it to the logs, so they killed the animals and sent term to market. The result was that the immer killing increased about 1,000,000 head and the winter supply is short. Then, too, the opening of foreign markets to the American hog had a great deal to do with it. The only difference here is the increased price to consumers, as New York does not speculate in previsions and lets intures, as far as they are concerned, severely alone. The supply is gradually increasing, however, and will soon be all right."

Richest Placers on the Continent. Richest Placers on the Continent.

SALT LARE, Jan 2.—The preparations for trips to the San Juan placer country from this place are proceeding rapidly. The excitement here is increasing every bour and the rush to the gold fields is increasing daily. Old time prospectors and speculators who wast to get into the country at the earliest possible moment, leave the railroad at Manoes and hire an oulfit or buy it out. A guidleman just returned from the diggings says the placers are the richest ever discovered in the United States.
