Will Mr. Hanna Say This?

Mr. President and Gentlemen Thank you, gentlemen, for this magnificent reception. It is encouraging to know one is in the house of friends; it is so different from being in the House of Parliament. They are a bunch of knockers there. They say we are squandering a million dol-lars on new Government house, but I want to tell you, my friends, that Government house will be a credit to the country, even though it will not help the country's credit. (Applause.) It will be the centre of Ontario's social functions, and you know, gentlemen, what that means. The smart set will gather there on the winter evenings, and there is a street near by from which you can look at the people going in, if you happen to be Of course, the place is hard to find-we had to have it that for the smart set. It was built literally in the woods on the edge of the valley overlooking the brickworks,

An Important Point. But there is another point to which the Opposition has failed to call attention, and it should not be over-When we bought that site the section of the city it is in had . never been developed: that is to say. it had no improvements, such as sewers and sidewalks. You could buy lots there for $40 a front foot, and now you cannot get land there for five times that amount. Think of the benefit it has been to the real estate speculators. They have probably made more out of it than it cost you to put up this magnificent structure. Gentlemen, that is just one phase of what the Government has accompl hed. We have passed the workme i's Compensation Act, which does not affect the farmer, and in which, therefore, you are not interested. And let me tell you, that if there is anything wrong with it the Opposition is to blame, for they did not oppose it, although they tried to have some amendments inserted.

Indeed, Yes. In these years of hard times, gentlemen, we have spent more money than has any previous adminstration, as you will discover when it comes to paying the bills. We have sent men into Northern Ontario to build roads for people who are not now residents of Canada, but who may come here to settle if we give them necessary inducements. These also, you are paying for, and you should be proud of it. At the same time we are planning to find out how much it will cost to improve the highways in front of your own homes, and when the time comes we will send you the bill, whether we proceed with the overlook what we are doing for edu-cation. Of course, with the Government house expenses, and such inwe could not appropriate our usual money; I mean we could not give you back the usual amount of your own money, for rural schools, but you are such an intelligent body of men in Western Ontario, and your children are so bright, that you really do not need much in the way of schools. (Applause.) We will spend lots of money on Toronto schools, the university, and the big institutions, where it is needed more.

Elevating the Kiddies. But we are doing something for the schools which has never been heard of before in any civilized country. We are teaching the children to remove their hats in elevators; I don't mean grain elevators, of course, but the kind we have in Government houses; we are teaching them how to behave toward the butler, and the footman, cook, housemaid, parlor maid and coachman, and you will agree with me that we could not produce an aristocracy without this kind of trainng. And as to bilingual schools, gentlemen, we have tried to get that question so muddled that no one knows where we stand, and that is what I call true statesmanship.

Sure, There's a Reason. Now, you want to know why I am here; why I am taking an interest in your convention. You know I don't come into your constituency very often, although I send Mr. Snider and the others when the occasion demands; but, gentlemen, when I wink the other eye, you will understand why I am here today. So far there has been no announcement of an election, and the mischief of it is that Sir James Whitney doesn't want an election, but-(the other eye vinked), (Tremendous applause.)

What better time could there be for an election than the present? The opposition has only twenty members, and they are a pesky lot. We don't want them, any of them. If they were out of the way we could do what we wanted. So we fixed the constituencies as well as we could. They will do very well for the coming election (other eye winked again). We will get rid of some of those humbugs. We have the money, and we are going to do it. We didn't riddle those ridings for nothing, be sure of that, and when we have wiped out the opposition in Ontario we will be in a position to help the Federal Government in its election; we will be just a pair of

Mr. Bowman, who has represented the old riding since 1908, said that in coming before the convention he felt like a man who had lost his home. The gerrymander, he declared, was absolutely without any justification. Somebody at Toronto, he said, is in deadly fear, or the election would not be brought on now. He paid the highest tributes to Mr. McDonald's ability in the House, and declared he would make every effort to help him win and show the Government that its unfair tactics will not be tolerated.
