City License Inspector Chief Forbes, who conducted the inspection of the hotel premises on the night of November 29, told the court that he found 29 bottles of whisky, four of beer and six bottles of champagne. The explanation of the 29 or more empty bottles and flasks which had been previously found on the premises was that they had been purchased from the Sre in London, and were returned to this side entered the hotel and emptied the contents, throwing the flasks in the yard or in the back of the hotel. The chief stated that there was easy access from the hotel to the room in the Oldham Block.

Licence Inspector Lucas, who accompanied the inspector on the search, corroborated the evidence of the chief, and stated that he had previously warned Young to have the flasks removed from the premises, and that the champagne removed from the premises, Officer Seabrook also corroborated the evidence of the chief.

Women by Million Are Doing Their "Bit" by Taking Places of Men

London, Dec. 1.—Correspondence of the Associated Press.—The saying that a woman's place is in the home has little application in war time. There are now in the British Isles 2,519,000 women employed outside their own homes. It is generally recognized that their rally to work "in the national interest" is going to make it difficult for parliament to refuse the demand for further wages which will be renewed when hostilities end.

During the first two years of war the increase of women workers, exclusive of purely feminine occupations, was $25,000,000 directly and $25,000,000 indirectly replaced male labor. In other words more than three-quarters of a million women left their homes to release that number of men for military service. In many cases the women went into the munition plants, where a considerable number of them have given up their lives in "doing their bit."

There seems to be no limit to the class of work women can do. At first it seemed strange to see girl conductors on the buses, girl window cleaners, van drivers and messengers. But as the war progressed the field broadened and now even in building, mining and quarrying scores of women are employed. The metal trades also have taken women into their ranks.

As a matter of fact, the number of women in the armed forces is increasing day by day, and the wages offered are far beyond the dreams of avarice to a majority of the English domestic workers.

The number of women employed in railway work has increased more than 200 per cent. Ordinarily the only railway posts open to women were clerks, typists and carriage-cleaning tasks. Now there are women ticket collectors, porters, engine cleaners and workshop laborers. In Glasgow and some other cities women are being tried out as tram drivers or motorwomen.

Interesting statistics regarding women's part in war work have been collected by the board of trade. The number of women recruited to industrial occupations between July, 1914, and July, 1915, was 362,000. Of this number, 263,000 were in the munition industry, 10,000 in the engineering industry, 1,000 in the electrical industry, 1,000 in the chemical industry, 1,000 in the textile industry, 1,000 in the
