"Crucity Him, crucity Him."

Catholic mothers of Cauada, whom shall your children serve? God or Mammun? You must choose, thoy cannot serve both. But how can we do anything to prevent the political infringement of our children. We can do much, we can influence those who have votes to our children. We can do much, we can influence those who have votes to use them in the cause of Catholic education, we can raise our voices on overy possible occasion, we can give double care to our children in the home and use overy possible precaution to prevent their contamination. More than all, we can pray. Of for the golden pen of St. Teresa, that the writer, her unworthy namesake, might write in letters of fire that should inflame each heart of the officacy that lies in the prayer of faith. "Whatsoover ye shall ask in My name, believing, ye shall receive." Can the words uttered by the lips of our Divine Lord over fait? We know they cannot. Then lot us act upon that knowledge and potition God to protect the divine rights lie has bestored upon us and preserve for our children the tone scarce also in the knowledge can be considered that of you are agreed as touching anything that you shall ask, it shall be done for you of My Father Who is in heaven."

The sigus of the times are gathering thick and fast around us overywhere, infidelity and atheism are being openly shauted where, but a few years age, they scarcely dared to lift their heads. Now creeds, plausible and affect they seemed they seeme to grace of God.

Of course we should all try to be sitably clothed according to the station of are occupying, rich and costly dress, suitable for these who are wealthy, rough even they commit sin when they aske their clothes a matter of comfacency, and despise others more labely dress; and when over small tradesman's and working girl must dress in and volvets and tawdy ribbons of y conceivable hus to sin is too y worse. Not only are thousand oring themselves any more worthy espect, for the daw in peracok's neces is almost invariably discovered, but they are squandering oy they cannot afford, and for which they will one day have to render an account.

Believe me, in this matter we must face the gravest responsibility. Each one of us is answerable for the part she is taking at the matter, either by wasting money and time, by setting a bad example and arousing the envy of others, or last, and warst fault of all ancerner at these wire cannot afford to dress beyond their scatten.

I hope none of my readers are offended at my plain speaking, but even if they are, I cannot help it, I am here for the purpose of placing the treth upon every subject, before them in the clear est and most foreible manner.

The reason why I have dwell so long upon this subject is, that I can see clearly the gravest dangers scheef of my these are without doubt the cawaing days of that awful era which is to see the almost complete overthrow of religion and morality, and if we are to quard ourselves and our children from these dangers we must purge ourselves of everything that can cast a shadow upon our spirituality and faith. It is well to the complete over the conflict of the glannour of the world, and fit our eyes and world of the glannour of the world, and fit our eyes an unwaveringly upon the Home Beyond.

spacious hall presented a very The spacious hall presented a very protty offect, the different stalls being ranged around the sides and the wares stanfully dispenced upon them so as to show to the best advantage. Indeed, if one went in with the intention of merely looking around it was necessary to blindfold encestly with a handkerchief, otherwise the eye would be certain to eight upon something impossible to resist, with the result of a purchase. The Ferris wheel, the large dell's house, and the doll stable were a source of constant delight to the children, whose larpy likife faces made everyone feel nice and happy too, and think with regret of the time when Santa Claus was something more to them than a disembodied spirit.

The hall was packed at the opening concert, which was exceedingly good. I congratulate all the performers. His
