

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

Amusement is the happiness of those that cannot think.

He who is much and often flattered soon learns to flatter himself.

Nobody should ever look anxious, except those who have no anxiety.

There is no greater punishment than being abandoned to one's self.

No man is worth much who has not a touch of the vagabond in him.

Four hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets.

Hope says to us constantly, "Go on, go on," and leads us thus to the grave.

As a general thing an individual who is clean in his person is neat in his morals.

Beauty intoxicates the eye as wine does the body. Both are morally fatal if indulged.

Society, more like a step mother than a mother, adores the children who flatter its vanity.

Nature knows no pause in progress and development and attaches her curse to all inaction.

Rein has the power of shedding a satisfaction over intervals of ease which I believe few enjoyments exceed.

The sense of justice in children is very strong - let mothers beware, for though infants cannot reason, they can feel.

There are a number of people, especially in politics, who are like bottles; they have no value except that which is poured into them.

If you take temptations into account, who is to say that he is better than his neighbor? A comfortable career of prosperity, if it does not make people honest, at least keeps them so.

Every grain of sand is a mystery; so is every daisy in summer, and so is every snowflake in winter. Both upward and downward, and all around us, science and speculation pass into mystery at last.

The industrious man seeks wealth and finds it. Let not the intellectual man murmur at the ill of fortune, for he did not seek wealth. It was not the consequence of his pursuit, but he sought knowledge and found it.

Forewarned is forearmed, says the proverb, but few proverbs were ever so mistaken. If anybody ever was effectually forewarned, I wish he would publish his autobiography. It might be of some use to the ingenious youth of the day.
