[ 105 ]

appointthey are

f gunners late their late their lay not be the offiguish the
The
fo that

eries will w to the

olas.

divided,
and unifecond
John's,
Amherst
us blow

termine eady to are emps will tit.

rch diiy li:tle

ceeding fc who

ground natever

When

When the artillery and troops are landed, a corps to be left to fecure the landing-place, while the rest march on, and endeavour to bring the French and Canadians to battle.

The officers and men will remember what their country expects from them, and what a determined body of foldiers are capable of doing against five weak battalions, mingled with a diforderly peafantry.

The foldiers must be attentive to their officers, and resolute in the execution of their duty.

THE END.

The Placart published by General JAMES WOLFE, Commander in Chief of the Troops of his Britannic Majesty, on his Arrival in the River St. Lawrence, 1759.

has set on foot a considerable armament by land and sea, to bring down the haughtiness of that crown. His aim is to destroy the most considerable settlements of the French in North-America: it is not against the industrious peasants, their wives and children, nor against the ministers of religion, that he designs making war. He laments the missfortunes to which this quarrel exposes them, and promises them his protection, offers to maintain them in their possessions, and permits them to follow the worship of their religion, provided that they do not take any part in the difference between the cowns, directly or indirectly.