RECIPES FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

The Woman's Home Companion makes itself sponsor for ten relishing sauces as follows:

Favorite Sauce.—Cream one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add gradually one-half cupful of powdered sugar and the yolks of two eggs, heating a cream; next add one-half cupful of cream, and cook over hot water until the mixture thickens. Then add a dessertspoonful of lemon juice, some nutmeg and the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth, blend thoroughly.

Kentucky Sauce.—Cream together two cupfuls of well-flavored brown sugar, one-half cupful of butter and three egg yolks until very light; then add one-half cupful of cream, and heat over hot water, stirring all the time, until it is foamy all through, then add flavoring. Serve immediately.

Fresh Fruit Sauce.—Beat together to a froth cream, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of powdered sugar and the white of one egg. When a cupful of ripe berries, cherries or other fruit, and sweeten, allowing it to stand an hour. Heat the beaten mixture over hot water until it becomes foamy, when strain into the fruit juice. If preferred, the fruit pulp may be added, but if possible strain out even the smallest seeds.

Sauce of canned fruit.—First strain the juice from peaches, apricots, pineapples, guineas or any preserved fruit, and add to it to taste, add enough cornstarch or arrowroot (wet with cold water) to thicken it slightly, boiling for five minutes, and adding lastly one-half cupful of lemon, one tablespoonful of cornstarch (wet in cold water), boil gently for five minutes, straining all the time.

Lemon Sauce.—Shave thin yellow skin of a lemon into one-half pint of water, and boil gently for five minutes; add half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cornstarch (wet in cold water), and boil three minutes longer. Beat an egg yolk with one tablespoonful of cold water, and add to the sauce, stirring it in. Strain, and add one tablespoonful of the best butter. The juice of the lemon and strain. Orange sauce is made in the same way.

 The pattern is in four sizes—2 to 5 years. For a boy of 4 years, the suit requires 3 1/8 yards of material 36 inches wide, or 2 1/4 yards 36 inches wide, or 1 5/8 yards 54 inches wide. Price of pattern 10 cents.

THE STORY OF THE WORLD PARTY'S TRIP TO LONDON.

Special accommodations have been secured from the Allan Line for The World party, and the ocean voyage will be a delight to all. Upon arrival at Liverpool special accommodations will be provided for the party on the trip to London via the London and North-Western Railway. The World party will stop at the Hotel Cecil during their stay in London. The Cecil has reputation amongst travelers as being the most delightful hotel throughout continental Europe. Each day of the stay in London will be a continuous round of sight-seeing and amusement. The morning will be devoted to individual shopping expeditions, according to the tastes of each member of the party. After luncheon carriages will take the party to various points of interest, such as the houses of parliament, the Tower of London, St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, St. James' Palace, Hyde Park. In the evening dinners will be given at the famous London restaurants, such as Cafe Royal, The Trocadero, Holborn Cafe and others. Following the dinner party each evening, The World party will adjourn to box parties at the principal London theatres. Paris will be visited, and as much accomplished as possible during the time at the disposal of the party. The World party of Ontario women will be extended every official courtesy during their stay in London. Are you going?

King's Daughters Rest Room for Girls Down Town.

Stimulated by the success of their philanthropic sisters in Ottawa, who recently opened a magnificent $10,000 building for the same purpose, the King's Daughters have enthusiastically started the ball rolling here. They have obtained three rooms on the first floor of the Bank of Montreal, corner Queen and Yonge-streets. One large room facing on Yonge-street has been prettily decorated and carpeted to match the draperies in silver and purple, the so-called "serenely" furnished, with all modern conveniences, and a reading room has been supplied with plenty of dishes for the girls' use at lunch-time. This room will be used as a kitchen room and a gas heater is installed, where a cup of hot coffee, tea or cocoa can be quickly made. The room is intended for the use of all girls employed in downtown stores, shops, offices and other places of employment. It is entirely free, and cordially invited to make use of them. One of the ladies of the society will be present each day. The rooms will be open all day and will be made as comfortable as possible. The downtown headquarters of the society, The King's Daughters are deserving of great praise for this high effort to make a downtown home for girls who have either to remain in their place of employment to eat their lunch or walk the streets during lunch hour.

Black Lingerie.

It's seen in petticoats. Petticoats, it's said, must match. Therefore woman likes the "black lingerie" that matches her dress. This petticoat is made of fine lawn and trimmed with dainty black lace. The correct cover to match is made quite upon the same lines. These two bits of "black lingerie" have been designed to wear under sheer black dresses.

Origin of Bridge

Apocryphal origin of bridge, which we have from England, the origin of the name of this very "towny" game, according to Trench Johnson, is curiously buccic. Twenty years ago, he says, two families at Great Dalby, in Leicestershire, England, visited each other on alternate nights, for a game of what they called "bridge." The game was played in a room which was divided into two sections by a table. The game was played in a room which was divided into two sections by a table. The World's Serial Story.

"And so we come to the old stone quarry yonder," he said, "the one that you can see from the door of this here hut. It was coming on to rain then, and there wasn't much light, so I took a quick bit of moon now and again when the clouds opened a bit. Ay, it was a nasty night—a rotten bad night. May-be if it had been dry and bright there wouldn't have been any trouble. You see, the path thereabouts runs very close to the edge of the quarry, and it was slippery, the path was. Well, he fell over the edge."

"Am!" said Faring. "Quite of his own accord?"

"He fell over the edge," said the other man, stoddily. "One minute he was there in front of me, the next he was gone. 'Yes, quite so,' said Faring, with a nod. 'In front of you, to be sure.' With the scurred face, 'and the next minute there wasn't nothing there at all.' 'I've paused a moment and accidentally looking away from the scene he brought up were distasteful to him. 'It's a nasty place,' he said, at length. 'That damn dark quarry is a nasty place of nights. It's deep and black, like, with water in the bottom of the holes, and things a-growing there. There's might be some of them down those deep places.' They're creepy. It's a rotten, nasty place." He scowled again and stirred uneasily. "I expect it was a matter of two hours," he said, slowly, "before I crept up enough nerve to go down. And even then I come back several times on the way before I got to the bottom and found him. He was lying half in a pool of water, and moaning and crying out most pitifully. I expect the water had brought him to his senses, because he was hurt very bad. His head was hurt—he had fallen on that—and one leg was there in a stone had been cut in the back, too. The money was there all night. In his pocket. 'What's done with his money? It and leave him?' asked Faring.

The other man laughed darkly, and he seemed to be laboring in honest embarrassment. "I looked up with an odd little deprecatory glance, almost like Johnnie's own. 'I was foolish, but I kept a-moaning and crying out so pitifully. There was a sort of cave near by, a sort of cross-groove where a stone had been cut out sideways very deep. It was warm and comfortable in the place. Well, I carried him in there, and he wasn't never a heavy-weight—and made him as comfortable as I could, and he lived there for close on six weeks. I'd left a bundle of things

Buchanan's Wife

By Dustus Forman.
 Published by Arrangement With Harper & Brothers

"I think we'll begin now, Mister Toomany-husband," said, "I think we'll just get you ready to go with Johnnie when Johnnie goes." He took up the pistol from his knees, and then he pointed it at the cylinder under his thumb. Each of the five cartridges was in place—a great prize for a little fellow like him, and he snapped the hammer down to his feet, stepping forward a pace away from the fire corner where he had been.

"We'll begin now," he said, and the hard eyes looked to Faring Faring with a very bitter hatred in their pale gleam.

Faring took a deep breath. He stood in very grave peril now, and he knew it. If the man with the pistol should, with the first shot, wound him severely enough to cripple him, the game was played out and done, and nothing within his prohibitions could turn his hand in to it to success.

He had suffered himself to be bound in the chair because at the time there had been no help for it, but he had hoped and watched for some small chance of escape to offer itself. No chance had come, and now it appeared that the time for such chances was past.

That, however, is not to say that he gave up hope or meant tamely to sit still and be murdered without trying very hard to save his life, and something which was much more worth while than that. The chair was old and weak, and his feet were not bound to it. The rope had been passed twice round its rather flimsy back and round his body, pinning his arms at the elbows. Given a minute's time, he was very sure that he could wrench and break his way free, tho, of course, that was out of the question while he faced an able-bodied man with a loaded pistol.

When his friend rose and came forward, holding the weapon ready to fire, Faring watched him very alertly, and he suffered his knees under him to plant his feet wider apart and more firmly on the floor. He meant to try to dodge the first shot, and then, before another could be fired, leap forward, bound as he was, and throw himself upon his assailant.

The scheme was not a wholly impracticable one. The distance between the two men was short, and Faring might quite possibly have succeeded, with an unexpected dash, in throwing the other man to the floor and then wrenching himself free of the chair before the other had recovered. But, as it happened, the situation suddenly passed into other hands.
