[From Toronto Globe of Monday, April 23, 1917.]

The spirit of Bordenism is the spirit of faction and disunion. Leadership in these perilous patriotism, by its wide vision and masculine grasp of affairs, and by its broad and tolerate sympatriotism at the considerations of party, and by its broad and tolerate sympatriotism. pathies attract to the side of the Government and to the service of the nation the enthusiastic and loyal support of every citizen. Bordenism has been tried and found wanting.

The leadership of Sir Robert Borden during the past two years has been lacking in the masculine qualities of statesmanship that are indispensable to the successful prosecution of ANOTHER REPULSE FOR FOE war abroad and to the sane and practical conduct of affairs at home. Shortcomings and unavoidwar aproad and to the same and practical conduct of adams at home. Substitute with unpreceable blunders might be forgiven any government suddenly brought face to face with unpreceable at the dented conditions of war, but the offences of the Borden cabinet smell to heaven and strike at the foundations of national character. They sap and undermine the codes of honor and standards of public decency to which ministers of the crown are expected to conform and by which their public conduct is judged. Doubly heinous are the sins of the Borden Government in the light of the great issues in this war, issues that distinguish between right and wrong and that raise an insuperable moral barrier between Canada and the Prussian fcc. While Canadian troops are facing death that British ideals may prevail throughout the dominion, the prime minister, Sir Robert Borden, shows his contempt for these ideals by flirting with popular applause in the British Isles in the company of Hon. sound of the battle on the Italian northern line. They had been on an eight-day march.

The correspondent was on a tour of the northern fighting front, where the great battle is continuing with unexampled violence, Major-Gen. Di Giorglo was found commanding the extreme left of the 4th Army at the point where the fighting was heaviest. Throughout yesterday and today the battle in the mountains has developed in a steady succession of heavy attacks and counter-attacks, with occasional brief intervals for reforming the lines and reorganizing new positions. Twelve different enemy assaults had been made within a few hours preceding the correspondent's visit to headquarters on the field, but the Italian lines had not yielded a foot of ground, and Gen. Di Giorgio was calm and confident that the defensive line would hold until reinforcements were swung into the fighting line

They had been on the march eight days, making more than fifteen miles a day.

The French reinforcements were first seen in the force. They were splendid looking young men. One of their officers with whom the correspondent talked and who had stripes, earned by gallantry, on his sleeves, said they had just arrived after a hard forced march, with others following.

Soon these others came in view, and for two miles the party passed through
