saving in fuel.

The Fused Joints prevent the radiator from leaking Every furnace has a radiator through which the gases and smoke pass to the chimney. Leaky radiator joints allow gas and fine dust ash to reach your living rooms through the registers. These radiator joints have to undergo the effects of expansion and contrac-tion produced by varying degrees of heat and cold when the radiator is built of steel and cement. Bolts and cement will not hold tight permanently.

In the Hecla the radiator has fused joints which cannot spread or leak because the walls of Armoo Iron are welded to the cast-iron at top and bottom into an inseparable joint. Hecla is equipped in design, construction and material to give extra heating comfort because of Clare Bros. three patented, exclusive features. Six sizes—to heat any building—large or small.
