"VERY APPROPRIATE"—"Hold the fort" was played by the band at a Conservative demonstration the other day at Brookville, when the procession started with Sir John A. Macdonald in a carriage leading. Some of the spectators thought this a little irreverent, but a remembrance of two lines of one of the verses of the hymn satisfied them that it was appropriate:—

"See the mighty host advancing, Satan leading on."

THE NORTHERN LIGHT.—This boat is now undergoing extensive repairs at the railway wharf. When finished, she will unquestionably be a stronger, better and more convenient boat than when she came from the hands of Mr. Sewell. The rudder gear, which was found to be so defective last winter, has been replaced by much stouter and stronger fixings. Her bow is now sheathed with iron plank. Four stout cross beams have been put in her immediately over her machinery. A portion of her deck, which was formerly of no use, has been turned into a Ladies' Cabin. The narrow state rooms, or berths, which once occupied both sides of the cabin, have been taken away, and wider and more comfortable ones put in on one side only. This arrangement gives a spacious cabin and comfortable state rooms, instead of the narrow cribs which she once had. The Engines are also undergoing a thorough overhauling and repairing. The "Northern Light" will, therefore, go into her winter quarters shortly, better equipped and better fitted out for her winter's work than ever before. After such a vast outlay of money, it is to be hoped that she will do her work during the coming winter in a satisfactory manner.—P. E. I. Argus.

MR. MACKENZIE, provoked by the calumnies which, though repeatedly disproved, the Tory leaders where not ashamed to repeat again and again at their meetings, handled some of these gentlemen severely on one or two occasions. This, some of the papers described as handling them without gloves; and thereupon the Montreal Gazette, writhing under the castigation administered by Mr. Mackenzie, said:—

"A man should be sure his hands are clean before he exposes them unnecessarily to the critical gaze of his fellowmen. Mr. Mackenzie has handled too much railway iron, or steel, of late, to make it prudent for him to expose them unnecessarily.

"It is the special honor of Mr. Mackenzie that he belongs to the common people; and that he has by his own talent and industry, raised himself to the position which he occupies as one of the leading politicians, if not of the statesmen, of the country. This is, indeed, something of which he may well be proud. To be a stonemason or an ironmonger, as long as he performs well the functions of his calling, is no disgrace to any man, and to have found opportunity in the interims of toil to acquire the education, and accumulate the knowledge, which has enabled him to play the part which he has played, is highly creditable to him. But he must know that to be a stonemason or an ironmonger is one thing, and to be the Premier of Canada is another and an altogether different thing; and what would be quite suitable to either of the two former of these callings would not be becoming in the latter. It may be all right for a man to work bare-handed handling stones in a quarry, or laying up a wall, but a gloved hand generally becomes a Prime Minister better. Or, to drop all figure, the style of address which may well enough become a man in any of the ordinary walks of common life may not become one who has been elevated to the highest office in the gift of his country."

Mr. Mackenzie, if he has erred at all in dealing with those whose whole stock in trade is calumny and slander, has erred on the side of moderation and forbearance. They have asserted that his hands are stained with fraud, peculation, and corruption so often that it was time for him to take off his gloves and show not only that his hands are clean, but that even if they bear still the marks of honest toil, no honest man need shrink from their touch, but all political shams and cheats may well dread their gripe.—Freeman.

The Weather we are to Have.

Vennor, the weather prophet and scientist, makes the following forecast for the fall, winter and next summer:—

"Autumn marked by a fine warm Indian summer after a rather early cold term, and ending wet. Winter; short, warm, wet and open with one or two severe terms of short duration—altogether gloomy and not healthy. Spring; very wet up to the middle of June. Summer; intensely hot and oppressive. The winter will be favorable to the increase of throat diseases and fevers—also cattle diseases. I agree with Professor Mansill in anticipating the approach of Asiatic cholera towards northern latitudes."

A Dry Place.

Mr. Dutcher the Temperance revivalist, having done "his good work" in Yarmouth the Halifax Herald correspondent sums up the results, thus:—"Yarmouth is dry. It's the dryest town in the Dominion. It is a well seasoned community. No sap is in her trunk; her leaves are withered, her branches bare. Twice a week, with the courage of heroes, and the resignation of martyrs, we march into Ryerson's Hall, and listen in silence to the impassioned harangues on the eternal blessedness and celestial beatitudes of a state of universal thirst. Though all the lakes are full, and "thousand streams roll onward to the sea," we're a parched and thirsty crowd. Everybody you meet considers himself the especial champion and defender of lime-kiln throats. A score or more of full-fledged Dutchers walk our streets, seeking whom they may reform. Our ministers—bless their guileless hearts — preach total abstinence (especially those of them who erst did preach "total depravity") Sunday after Sunday, as though the chief end and aim of man was to make himself as combustible as possible."

The Russian Losses.

This is without doubt the most disastrous campaign the Russian arms have ever suffered. The military correspondent of the London Times, who is none other than Sir Henry M. Havelock, the gallant son of his father, estimates their losses as follows: Before their passage of the Danube, 7,000 sick were in the hospitals, and 5,000 were sent back to Russia. The crossing at Braila, with the subsequent combats at Matchin and Babadagh, lost 1,200 men; Zimmerman lost 1,000 in the Dobrudscha, and invalided 8,000 to Russia; the repulsed passages from Oltenitza and Glamunda lost 2.000; Simnitza and Sistova, 1,400; the affair at Biela, 1,500; those of Rustchuk and Rasgard, 3,000; the march to Tirnova and the crossing of the Balkans, 2,000; Gourkho's retreat, 7,800; the taking of Nikopolis, 1,400; the first battle of Plevna, 5,000; the second 11,000; their repulse from Lovidscha, 1,800. In the meantime 10,000 sick have been sent to Russia from the main army of the Danube, and there is no record of the deaths in the hospitals, nor of the number who fell at the capture of Lovidscha on the 5th September, nor in the defeats and during the disastrous retreats at Karahassanhoi and from Kara-Lom. In short, the total as known considerably exceeds 70,000 men, and, as a German officer with the imperial headquarters remarked., "the Russians, without gaining a single important victory, have already lost the effective aid of two entire army corps."

But this is not all. Their financial standing has been ruined for at least fifty years to come. Their loan debenture coupons now due, are like those of the Toronto Water Commission, being taken up by the banks and held over for a year at heavy interest. The Roumanian railways have a bill of $20,000,000 for transport and food en route which they cannot get settled; and the contractors who furnish the bread and meat, iron, cartridges, shot and shell, rifles, horses and waggons, hay and tents, and all the rest of it, have three and four months' accounts yet unpaid. The daily cost of the war in all its branches is estimated at nearly a million dollars, and this does not include the money spent in forwarding recruits from the interior nor the cost of the desultory operations in Asia. The shells thrown into Plevna, and there were thousands of them, cost $40 each. The Government's paper, in other words, their loans, is only taken at a shave of nearly 30 per cent. The strain on Russia's men and money is indeed terrific; and the end has not even begun.—The Mail.

Tonic.

Every one, at times, feels the necessity of some restorative of the vital powers, depressed by mental or bodily exhaustion. In such conditions, let every one, instead of flying to the alcoholic or medicinal stimulants, which must be followed by depression equal to their excitement, reinvigorate his deranged system by the natural tonic elements of the PERUVIAN SYRUP.
