Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of dyspepsia, heartburn, and indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain condition of the stomach nerves. It is this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop to the conclusion that the only way to cure stomach trouble is to restore the stomach nerves to their normal condition. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, doing direct as the stomach nerves, alone brought that success to the stomach nerves. ### FOURTEEN POUNDS IN TWO MONTHS

Remarkable Gain Made by Terra Nova, Cape Breton, Woman

"Father Morrissey's No. 10" (Lung Tonic) has wrought some wonderful cures. Here is a typical case, as described by the patient herself:
"During the Fall of 1906 I contracted a severe cold, which settled upon my lungs. After being treated by two physicians of high standing my condition was not any better, but in fact getting worse. My friends began to have serious doubts about my recovery. I had heard of Father Morrissey's remarkable career as a medical adviser, and wrote to him explaining my case. In a few days I received an encouraging letter from him, and some of his 'Lung Tonic,' and immediately I began to improve, gaining fourteen pounds in two months. I strongly recommend his 'Lung Tonic' for Colds and any form of Lung Disease."

Yours sincerely,
ANNIE McDONALD.

From a Woman's Point of View

As soon as children are big enough to sit up, let them begin to amuse themselves. The mother or nurse who spends hours every day keeping the baby's attention occupied by building houses with blocks or cards, beating on the coal shuttle with the tongs, turning a music box or pulling a small vehicle with an automatic bell, is unconsciously taking one of the best means of dwarfing baby's imagination.

Of course it is hardly fair to cut ones self off from any play with the children. To gallop in harness to get on all fours and play bear, or to hide behind the window curtain and play boo, is to leave all care behind and forget that there is any trouble in the world.

But to keep baby amused every waking moment of the day is quite another matter. The best children in the world are the ones who make their own amusements. They are the most inventive and their originality frequently develops into a self-reliance that affects their whole character.

The baby who is left to discover that the world is very full of things, the back yard a hand of adventure, intense interest and the counterpart a region of mysterious charm, will not demand to have his blocks piled up 50 times a day in order that he may ruthlessly knock them into a mass of ruins.

Then, by and by, when he is older and comes to the age of picture books and lead soldiers, things are more real to him than to the child who has always been amused. When he marshals his regiments in fighting array it is not for a sham battle.

He is a general, and in his mind he sees before him the great plain which is to be the battlefield. He hears the blast of the trumpets and the beat of the drums and the nursery walls are hidden by clouds of smoke. As he turns the pages of his books the people step from their places in the picture and become human.

Then in that blissful time between supper and going to bed, when mother reads aloud, the beloved facts of his favorites, that he has learned by heart when there was no time for anybody to read to him, fill the room.

The marquis of Caliman, Puss in Boots, Alice and Jack the Giant-Killer the Red Queen and the March Hare, King Arthur and his Knights, all the beloved pageant pass before him, and he smiles at each old friend until his eyes close in dreamless sleep.

A despairing housekeeper remarked the other day that she thought women should be fined for writing misleading letters of reference, as so many do in order to stand well with the intelligence offices, giving a list of virtues and accomplishments that are quite non-existent. They evidently think this form of fibbing commends them to servants who might not be willing to engage with them if the truth were written of their cronies.

To fix the standard of one's physical measurements and make one's figure conform to it is an ideal many women have dreamed of. Now and then some woman makes efforts, in the way of dieting and Turkish baths, to realize it.

she seldom really hopes. It is just a dream. There is one woman, however, who set out to attain this ideal and succeeded—Miss Maude Odell, whose beauty won the English $10,000 prize. Miss Odell set out when she was a girl of 14 to "have a perfect figure," and how she did it she tells in the April New Idea.

Fresh air and exercise are the secrets that she used. "Rules I abhor," she says. I eat when I am hungry. I always did. I sleep when I am sleepy, and I always have a good circulation, as I look after the circulation when I first wake up, and never lose sight of it during the day. I consider it when I am out of doors, and it prevents me from taking cold."

Does the Mind Rule the Body?

Does the Mind Rule the Body? asks and answers Dr. Woods Hutchinson in the Saturday Evening Post.

"One of the dearest delusions of man through all the ages has been that his body is under the control of his mind," he writes. "Even if he didn't quite believe it in his heart of hearts, he has always wanted to. The reason is obvious. The one thing that he felt absolutely sure he could control was his own mind. If he couldn't control that, what could he? Ergo, if man could control his mind and his mind could control his body, man is master of his fate."

"Unfortunately, almost in proportion as he becomes confident of one link in the chain he becomes doubtful of the other. Nowadays he has quite as many qualms of uncertainty as to whether he can control his mind as about the power of his mind over his body. By a strange paradox we are discovering that our most genuine and lasting control over our minds is to be obtained by modifying the conditions of our bodies, while the field in which we modify bodily conditions by mental influence is steadily shrinking."

THE SICK IN MIND

"For centuries we punished the sick in mind, the insane, loading them with chains, shutting them up in prison cells, starving, yes, even flogging them. We exercised their demons, we prayed over them, we argued with them, without the record of a single cure. Now we treat their sick and ailing bodies, just as we would any other class of chronic patients, with rest, comfortable surroundings, good food, baths and fresh air, correction of bad habits, gentleness and kindness, leaving their minds and souls practically without treatment, excepting in so far as ordinary, decent humanity and consideration may be regarded as mental remedies—and we cure from thirty to fifty per cent., and make all but five comfortable, contented, comparatively happy."

"We are still treating the inebriate, the habitual drunkard, as a minor criminal, by mental and moral means, with what hopeful results let the disgraceful records of our police courts testify. We are now treating insanity by the removal of alcohol and the fitting of glass juvenile crime by the establishing of playgrounds, poverty and pauper surroundings, and all for the first time with success."

"In short, not only have all our substantial and permanent victories over bodily ills been won by physical means, but a large majority of our successes in mental and moral disease as well. Yet the obsession persists, and we long to extend the realm of mental treatment in bodily disease."

"That the mind does exert an influence over the body, and a powerful one, in both health and disease, is obvious. But what we are apt to forget is that the whole history of the progress of medicine has been a record of diminishing resort to his power as a cure."

DIMINISHING RESORT TO MENTAL AGENCY

"Instead of being an untired remedy it is the most thoroughly tested, most universal, most ubiquitous remedy listed anywhere upon the pages of history—and it may be frankly stated, in civilized countries, as widely discredited as tested. The proportion to which it survives in the medicine of any race is the measure of that race's barbarism and backwardness. Today two of the most significant criteria of the measure enlightenment and of control over disease of either the medical profession of a nation or an individual physician are the extent to which they resort to and rely upon mental influence and opium. Psychotherapy and narcotics are, and ever have been, the sheet-anchors of the charlatan and the miracle-worker."
