

12.

party. The people have a right to know what kind of government they are going to get if they vote in a certain way.

They know the record of the present administration; they know that it is composed of men of integrity, ability, vision, and energy; they know, too, that it has a coherent, stable following in the country. We do not have to make unnatural alliances with people of diverse or divergent political views.